Repeal Arms Ban to Keep Peace, Hull, President Ask

Legislative Parley Monday to Decide On Steps, if Any, Barkley Asserts

By Robert C. Albright

President Roosevelt and Secretary of State Cordell Hull yesterday jointly asked Congress to repeal the wartime arms embargo "for the cause of peace and in the interest of American neutrality and security."

Arguments for repeal were presented by Hull in a dispassionate, six-page message forwarded by the President with a brief foreword.

Leaders hailed their statements as "clear, forceful and right," but failed to signal any effort to revive the drive for the six-point neutrality program sidetracked early this week by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

Isolationists Stand Pat

Isolationist opponents called it "the curtain drop" on the issue so far as this session is concerned, renewed their charges of attempted foreign intervention and declared no votes had been changed by the joint appeal.

Whether the Administration's renewed stand for embargo repeal would presage a summer-long fight to revive the legislation or whether the record was being summed up for future and possibly special session reference, appeared to wait on Monday's legislative conference at the White House. Senate Majority Leader Barkley said he believed a decision would be reached at that time.

Meantime, the Senate Foreign Relations Committee called on Secretary Hull for an opinion on whether pending legislation to embargo trade with Japan would violate the 1911 treaty of amity and commerce with Japan or the Nine-Power Pact itself. Chairman Pittman, anxious to move this measure to the floor apart from the neutrality issue, conferred later in the day with the Secretary of State.

Noting the 12-to-11 vote by which the Senate committee postponed neutrality action, the President said it is abundantly clear to him that Congress should act at this session in the interest of peace and American security.

No Pique in Message

There was no trace of pique or opprobrium in his 120-word message and Hull weighed the arguments on both sides of the issue.

Hull said opponents of the Administration's neutrality position were "misleading" the American people to rely upon the "false and illogical delusion" that an arms embargo would keep America out of war. He reminded members of his warm friendships in Congress, where he passed "the best years of my life," and appealed for close-nonpartisan cooperation "in the present grave international situation."

"The entire question of peace and neutrality at this serious juncture in its possible effects upon the safety and the interest of the United States during the coming months is of the utmost importance," Hull concluded. "This question should, in my judgment, receive full and careful consideration and be acted upon by this Government without unnecessary or undue delay."

Key argument in the Hull appeal was that the existing arms embargo plays into the hands of those na-

Barking Dogs' Good-Neighbor Policy Defended in Court

Mrs. Harriet A. Stuart with Doll, Honey and Nola, 3 of her 12 dogs

Mrs. Harriet A. Stuart, collector of dogs on the grand scale, appeared yesterday in Police Court to defend her 12 dogs as good neighbors on anybody's street.

The pets—five German shepherds, three Dobermann-Pinschers, two mongrels, one fox terrier and one pointer—involved their mistress in litigation when Mrs. Stuart, who lives at 3007 Albemarle street northwest, was named in three charges of "harboring barking dogs."

That they do bark—at least, the Dobermanns—Mrs. Stuart was among the first to admit in yesterday's proceedings before Judge Hobart Newman. "They get on my nerves sometimes," Mrs. Stuart said, "but I try to keep them quiet."

Testifying that these efforts were unsuccessful were six complainants, led by L. A. Carruthers, of 4600 Thirtieth street northwest, president of the Federation of Citizens Associations.

Carruthers hastened to establish himself before the court as a friend of dogs in general. "We had a French poodle for 19 years," he testified, "but we only keep small dogs. Twelve are too many. They are a constant disturbance."

Mrs. Stuart told the court that she has placed her property on sale so she can buy an eight-acre place in the country, where she and the dogs will not be disturbed.

Judge Newman postponed sentence until August 1, hinting that at that date "the fewer the dogs the lighter the sentence."

Daladier Calls French Army Invincible

Planes Bought in U. S. In Paris Show; Mother Of Roosevelt Guest

By the Associated Press

Paris, July 14.—Premier Daladier proclaimed tonight the invincibility of the French army after France and Britain joined on the 150th anniversary of the French Revolution in a massed parade of their land, sea and air forces.

The French army "is capable of breaking any attacks that can imperil our country," the premier declared in a world-wide Bastille Day broadcast.

"Our reborn aviation is united to the aviation of a great, friendly people who would protect our soil as we would protect theirs if it became necessary for us to resist attack."

British planes flew in formation with French planes this morning during a great parade of 30,000 of France's finest troops with 450 specially picked British soldiers.

Mrs. Roosevelt Watches

More than 1,000,000 persons saw the demonstration, the first joint display of military might by the two powers since the World War. It was reviewed by President Albert Lebrun, Daladier, British War Secretary Leslie Hore-Belisha and the chiefs of staff of the army, navy and air forces of both countries.

Mrs. James Roosevelt, mother of President Roosevelt, was among Lebrun's guests.

Daladier spoke later in a downpour in the amphitheater of the Trocadero Palace on the banks of the Seine at a solemn evening ceremony uniting the empire in celebration of the revolution which be-

50,000 Rush British Tokyo Embassy

Police Stem Onset Of Crowd Screaming Its Hate for English

By the Associated Press

Tokyo, July 14.—A triple police cordon balked attempts of angry demonstrators to rush the gates of the British Embassy today as a noisy crowd of 50,000 men, women and children staged one of the greatest outbursts against a foreign country in Japan's history.

A march on the embassy climaxed nation-wide demonstrations, in which Japanese newspapers estimated 15,000,000 persons participated, to show bitterness against Britain for her aid to China.

Travelers arriving from Tsingtao said property of the American Standard Vacuum Co. was damaged in anti-Brttish demonstrations there, which spread from the consulate to the Hongkong-Shanghai Bank Building. The company's offices are in the bank building.

Repairs Arranged For

Representatives of the Japanese consulate were reported to have visited the Standard officials and apologized for the "mistake" and arranged for repairs.

The accounts brought out by the travelers were the first detailed reports of the anti-British outbreaks in Tsingtao, which started weeks ago and have become increasingly violent.

Japanese accounts of today's Tsingtao incident said hand grenades which were thrown were from persons who "maybe were anti-Japanese agitators, trying to aggravate British-Japanese relations."

Woman Slaps Rival, Kills D. C. Man in Tropic Triangle

By the United Press.

Panama City, Panama, July 14.—A young married woman confessed today that she killed Madison Love, of Washington and New York, 33-year-old graduate of the Naval Academy at Annapolis, whom she accused of wooing and then jilting her.

The confession was made by Mrs. Eileen Watson, 31, wife of Robert Watson, Canal Zone surveyor, employed by the American Bureau of Shipping. After she had embodied the confession in a signed statement before Circuit Judge Manuel Burgos she was held incommunicado.

[Robert Watson, the woman's husband, announced he would stand by his wife, and said Love "had it coming to him," according to the International News Service.—Editor's note.]

1 Killed, 20 Hurt in New WPA Riots

All Minneapolis Projects Closed as City Withdraws Its Protection

By the Associated Press

Minneapolis, July 14.—Day-long strife centering around a WPA sewing project brought death to one man and injuries to nearly a score of men, women and children and resulted in announcement tonight by State WPA Administrator Linus Glotzbach that all WPA work in Minneapolis would be closed indefinitely.

The most serious outbreak occurred shortly after 7 p. m. when 100 women, comprising the late day shift, were escorted from duty amid gunfire, tear gas bomb explosions and brick and rock throwing.

Emil August Bergstrom, of Minneapolis, was shot in the head and died a few minutes later. Several policemen were hurt by stones. Three persons, including a 14-year-old boy, a woman, and a man, were slightly wounded by gunfire. Three policemen and several others suffered from tear gas.

City Stops Protection

Bergstrom was struck by a bullet as he stood at a gasoline filling station almost directly across the street from the sewing project building.

Glotzbach's suspension of local WPA projects came after Mayor George E. Leach said the city would not assume further responsibility for operation of WPA projects.

Federal Bureau of Investigation men, ordered here by Attorney General Frank Murphy, have been studying reports of intimidation of non-striking WPA workers but took no part in armed protection of the sewing machine project employes.

The firing tonight began, according to Sergt. John Albright, after persons from a filling station lot across the street and from the roofs of nearby buildings pelted the women with missiles.

Earlier in the day, six persons received hospital treatment following two clashes.

The wounded in tonight's fray were:

Sam Litinski, 40, gunshot wounds in left leg.

Lynn Thompson, 14, shot in hand.

Patrolman John Schaefer, 27, slugged in face.

Don Berg, newspaper photographer (Minneapolis Star), bullet wound in finger.

John Solberg, gunshot wound in leg.

Blast Traps 30 Two Miles Down In Kentucky Mine

Special Dispatch to The Post

Providence, Ky., July 14.—Rescue squads, working in shifts of ten each, were working feverishly tonight to reach 30 men entrapped two miles underground in a coal mine explosion near here tonight.

One man, William Reynolds, was brought to the surface by rescuers but he was not questioned as to the plight of his comrades because "his air was bad."

Cause of the blast was undetermined and W. F. Hume, secretary of the Duvin Mining Co., operator of the mine, said he could not hazard a statement on extent of the danger confronting the trapped men until rescue squads report.

Charles O. Herbert, supervising engineer of the United States Bureau of Mines office in Vincennes, Ind., said he planned to leave at once with a truckload of rescue apparatus.

Farmingdale, N. Y., July 14 (INS).—Two Army aviators were killed when their blue and yellow pursuit plane crashed late today in Beth Page State Park near Farmingdale.

An hour and 45 minutes later, after the torn frame of the ship had been wrenched apart, the two were identified as Maj. Paul C. Durbin, 45, of Flushing, and Sergt. Allen W. Lewis, 28, of Brooklyn, on a routine flight out of Mitchel Field.

Retirement Bill, 5% Rate, Pass House

Compulsory Limits Set at 65 and 70 as Legislators Revise U. S. Pension Act

The House late yesterday passed the civil service retirement bill, making numerous changes in retirement ages for Government employes and increasing an employe's rate of contribution to the retirement fund from 3½ per cent to 5 per cent of his compensation.

The measure, guided by Chairman Ramspeck, of the Civil Service Committee, was sent to the Senate for adjustment of several differences.

As it passed the House by a voice vote, the bill makes compulsory retirement ages 65 and 70, depending on the type of work, instead of 62, 65 and 70. A provision was inserted to permit persons reaching 62 between now and January 1 to retire in accordance with the present law. This amendment was especially designed for workers in the Navy Yard and railway mail clerks, Ramspeck said.

60 Is Optional Age

The optional retirement age is set at 60 after 30 years' service, or 62 after 15 years. (Present law includes three categories, at 68, 63 and 60). Department heads are given the right to ask the Civil Service Commision to retire inefficient employes at the voluntary retirement age.

A member of the fund would be permitted to accept a reduced annuity during his lifetime, and designate a surviving beneficiary to receive the balance.

The 5 per cent contribution to the retirement fund, as approved by the House, compares with the 4 per cent previously voted by the Senate.

Can Retire at 55

Provision is made for voluntary retirement at the age of 55 by an employe with 30 years of service, on an annuity having a value equal to the present worth of a deferred annuity at the age of 60.

The bill prohibits continuance of employes in the service beyond the compulsory retirement age, except by executive order.

Ramspeck, estimating that the system, as revised in the bill, would cost the Government $500,000 more per annum than at present, said the measure represents "the most reasonable retirement proposal that can be enacted into law at the present time, in fairness to the employes as well as the Government."

Steward Lauds Bill

Luther C. Steward, president of the National Federation of Federal Employes, last night received passage of the bill "with great satisfaction."

He said the bill "marks a long step forward in the liberalization and improvement of the Federal retirement law. If approved by the Senate and signed by the President, this new legislation will play an important role in the general program, which has as its goal the modernization of Federal personnel administration as a whole."

He regretted, however, removal of the provision for including members of Congress in the retirement provisions. He said "we believe such a provision to be worth while."

Autopsy Results Indicate Murder In River Death

Preliminary results of an autopsy on the body of an unidentified man found Wednesday in the Potomac at Marshall Hall, Md., indicate he was murdered, Charles County authorities said last night.

"It seems quite definite the man was dead before he entered the water," Dr. James L. McKavanagh, acting county coroner, told The Post.

The autopsy was performed at Waldorf by Dr. J. Howard Maldeis, from the State coroner's office in Baltimore. Dr. Maldeis will make a full report to Charles County officials today or Monday.

Sheriff Robert V. Cooksey, of Charles County, said the case "is at a standstill" until the man's identity is determined.

Supply Bill Passed, Some D. C. Employes May Get Wages Today

Compromise Comes After Roosevelt's Message; $6,000,000 Lump Sum Included

By James D. Secrest.

A $48,000,000 District supply bill, carrying $6,000,000 in a Federal payment, was rushed to the White House last night a short while after a Senate-House deadlock had been broken by a Presidential message.

While the two-weeks-late appropriations measure was expected to be signed promptly by President Roosevelt, Auditor Daniel J. Donovan stated that it is unlikely that municipal officials will be able to meet the city's $800,000 pay roll today. Employes will be paid probably Monday, he said, and no later than Tuesday.

Maj. Donovan explained that requisitions have already been prepared and submitted to the Treasury, but cannot be signed until the supply bill becomes a law. They must be countersigned by the Comptroller General before the pay roll is released.

Many District employes, including police and firemen, are paid in checks, and there is a possibility that their pay may be available today. Others, including administrative workers, are paid in cash, and these envelopes must be prepared after the money is released by the Treasury.

$1,000,000 Increase

House acceptance of a $1,000,000 increase in the lump-sum payment came suddenly and unexpectedly as District officials were conferring with local bankers over an offer to lend them money to avert a payless payday. An afternoon meeting to work out details was called off after the Congressional action. It followed a day of hurried conferences between conferees and House leaders.

President Roosevelt in letters to Chairman Overton, of the Senate subcommittee, and Chairman Collins, of the House subcommittee, called attention to the approaching payless payday and suggested that a continuing resolution be adopted as an emergency measure.

As a final concession to the House, the Senate agreed to eliminate a $600,000 increase in the relief appropriation, including aid for unemployed employables, and almost $600,000 in school building projects designed to replace obsolete structures and unify elementary schools.

Aid Decrease Asked

The slash in the relief appropriation was requested by the District Commissioners, who pointed out in a letter to Senator Overton (Democrat), of Louisiana, that a survey would be made and if additional funds are found to be needed that a deficiency appropria-

Lo, the Poor Congressmen—

They Kill Pension for Selves, Fearing Results 'Back Home'

Dire Picture of Possible Poverty Painted In Debate, but to No Avail, as House Rejects Retirement Bill by Ramspeck

By John B. Oakes.

The specter of former Congressmen living in abject poverty was flaunted in the House yesterday as a proposal to give retirement benefits to Senators and Representatives was defeated, 119 to 73.

Doggedly fought for by Chairman Ramspeck, of the Civil Service Committee, the contributory pension plan was included in a bill to alter the civil service retirement act.

Hovering over the House during the debate was a double fear—on the one hand, fear of what "the folks back home" would think of their representatives voting themselves retirement benefits, and, on the other hand, fear of being penniless after leaving office.

The first fear won.

Representative Crowther (New York) Republican, summed up the situation when he told the House he was reminded of a similar situation several years ago, when it was asserted "many members voted against the proposition with their fingers crossed and hoping to God it would pass."

The pension proposal would have put members of Congress on the same retirement basis as persons in the civil service. Representative Ramspeck explained members would have to serve five years to be eligible for benefits, but if they remained in Congress less than five years, their annual contribution of $500 would be re-

Lending Bill Test Won by Administration

Committee Approves $800,000,000 Fund For Housing Authority

Administration forces yesterday won a preliminary test on President Roosevelt's $3,460,000,000 lending program when the House Banking Committee approved an $800,000,000 fund for the U. S. Housing Authority for slum clearance and low-cost housing.

Necessary votes for approval were gained when Administration leaders agreed to earmark $200,000,000 of the fund for construction of low-cost housing in rural areas. Earlier the committee had defeated, 14 to 11, a Republican move to postpone action on the housing bill until the next session of Congress.

Before finally approving the bill, 14 to 10, the committee inserted an amendment by Representative Williams (Democrat,), of Missouri, stipulating that local communities must contribute 10 per cent of the cost of housing projects either in cash or in land values.

Showdown Forced

Chairman Steagall (Democrat), of Alabama, forced the showdown on the housing bill to clear the way for swift action on the remainder of the lending program at the personal request of President Roosevelt. Steagall said he hoped to have the entire program before the House within a week.

President Roosevelt, meanwhile, informed a delegation of ten House members, headed by Representatives Starnes (Democrat), of Alabama, and Delaney (Democrat), of New York, that the proposed $500,000,000 PWA program was out of the question at this session.

Modified Bill Offered

Members of the group explained there was no provision in the budget for a new PWA program, but that he expected the self-liquidating lending program to speed recovery. He cited, they said, that northern metropolitan areas had received most of the PWA benefits, whereas he hoped the self-liquidating plan would help the Southern and Western States. They said he emphasized the South and West needed help through Government assistance more than the Northern States.

Undismayed by Mr. Roosevelt's attitude, Starnes introduced late in

Speed Ordered For Data on Playgrounds

Barrett Appointed Co-Ordinator at First Session of Commission

Lewis R. Barrett, co-ordinator for the National Park Service, was named administrator of the new Playground Commission at its first meeting yesterday, and warned that speed was essential in laying the groundwork for an expanded and unified recreational system in the District.

Instructed to study and report on playground personnel and facilities, Barrett was told his report was wanted "in the next few days." Until then, no additional playgrounds will be opened to take children off the District's traffic ridden streets, Commissioner Hazen said.

"We want to know where we stand before taking action," he explained, "and for that reason, Barrett has been asked to present us a picture of the entire system with relation to administrative costs, personnel and facilities."

Hazen added that 50 more supervisors from WPA and eight "light duty" policemen are standing by to take over as soon as they can be used. It may also be found advisable, he said, to use volunteers from parent-teacher and civic organizations.

Barrett will operate under supervision of the commission, which

Portsmouth, N. H., July 14 (INS).—High seas, caused by storm winds, today forced a halt in salvage work on the submarine Squalus, sunk with 26 dead off the Isles of Shoals.

Before the storm broke, divers had gone down to the submarine in 40 fathoms of water, to ascertain extent of damage caused when the submarine broke from the muddy bottom, lunged to the surface and then settled back to the ocean floor. Four pontoons were broken loose from the Squalus as a result.

An inspection of the submersible's hull and cable and air lines is necessary before salvage work can be resumed.

Can't Strike, President Tells WPA Workers

Capitol Hill Lauds Stand; Green Heads Protest Delegation

By the Associated Press

President Roosevelt branded the walkouts of WPA workers a strike against Government yesterday while fresh violence flared on the picket lines.

Making it emphatically clear that the Administration recognized no right on the part of WPA employes to strike, the President said at a press conference: "You cannot strike against the Government."

His words generally were applauded on Capitol Hill, but on hundreds of WPA projects thousands continued to remain away from their jobs in protest against the wage regulations of the relief act.

Rochester Projects Closed

In addition to fatal rioting at Minneapolis, Rochester (N. Y.) projects were closed to avoid the violence that Lester W. Herzog, upState New York WPA administrator, said appeared certain if they continued. He reported that roving bands of WPA strikers had visited the projects, trying to add to the walkout. Herzog asked a Department of Justice investigation.

In Washington, the American Federation of Labor and the United States Conference of Mayors brought increased pressure on the Administration to ease the new relief act's regulations, but there was no sign of yielding, although an A. F. of L. delegation said it had received assurances from President Roosevelt that he would "explore" the possibilities of its suggestions.

The attitude at national WPA headquarters that the new act must be enforced strictly was evidenced further, however, by continued dismissal of striking WPA workers who had been absent from the job for five consecutive days, and by an announcement from Col. Harrington, WPA commissioner, that 300,000 would be slashed from the rolls by August 1. It was indicated a total of 18,000 to 20,000 strikers had been dismissed.

Longer Hours Fought

The cut ordered by Harrington is designed to bring the total WPA enrollment down to 2,100,000. The enrollment already has been reduced from 2,600,000 to 2,400,000. Harrington said the reduction would be effected largely by dropping those workers who have been on the rolls for 18 consecutive months.

The new relief act, which went into effect July 1, directed that such workers be furloughed for 30 days.

The current WPA protest walkouts have been directed chiefly at new wage regulations requiring WPA employes to work 130 hours a month. These regulations had the effect of reducing the hourly pay of skilled workers who had been receiving the prevailing local wage for their type of work.

Strikers' Dismissal Protested

Mr. Roosevelt's press conference remarks were made before he received a new delegation from the American Federation of Labor, headed by President Green, which pleaded for changes in the wage regulations.

Green said the group discussed the situation with the President, represented to him the "great distress throughout the country and the need of correcting the situation," and was assured by Mr. Rooseveilt that he would "explore" the possibilities of their suggestions.

The A. F. of L. chieftain said the one thing that was emphasized was the need for maintaining the minimum wage scale, but that the group also protested the dismissal of persons who had been on strike five days.

A committee from the Conference of Mayors drafted what Mayor LaGuardia of New York City, conference president, termed "suggestions" to Harrington for "easing" the restrictions.

They were not made public, but it was disclosed that one was a proposal that persons employed on WPA construction projects not be required to work 130 hours a month. Harrington told the mayors he thought this could not be done, under the law.

Some Congress members who have advocated revision of the wage regulations said continuance of the strike was damaging their chance of getting Congress to approve changes.

Minton Backs President

Representative Bradley (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, one of these, said he had suggested to labor leaders that they prevail on their workers to refrain from striking and, in the meantime, continue representations to individual Congress members.

Senator Adams (Democrat), Colorado, asserted that the Administration had adopted a "sound attitude" toward the WPA walkouts and Senator Minton (Democrat), Indiana, told reporters:

"The President is absolutely right. The Administration has always been a friend to the working people. If there is to be any change in the law, it should come about through orderly Congressional processes."

Pennsylvania A. F. L. Balks

Senator Norris (Independent), Nebraska, declared: "It is fundamentally wrong to strike against the Government. It seems to me that when people are getting something from the Government they should not attempt to strike. I think the President's attitude is very sound."

Despite the President's statement, G. J. Walters, Pennsylvania head of the A. F. L. Building Trades Council, said the A. F. L. would go through with its State-wide strike on WPA projects until Congress rescinded the 130-hour law.

The strike, called to begin at 4:30 p. m. yesterday, was not expected to be fully apparent until Monday.

J. Edgar Hoover Godfather to U. S. Agent's Son

J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, was godfather to a future G-man yesterday at Hamline Methodist Church.

Hoover's namesake, John Edgar Nichols, is the son of Special Agent Louis B. Nichols and Mrs. Nichols, of Foxcroft Heights, Va. The Rev. H. W. Burgan, the pastor, christened the child from a sliver bowl, which was the gift of the godfather.

Mr. and Mrs. Nichols held a reception in the church after the ceremony, which was attended by friends and relatives.

was included in the District supply bill. The measure provides for merger of the Playground and Community Center departments under joint direction of the Board of Education and the Commissioners.

Hazen indicated that offers from Ross Haworth, WPA administrative assistant, to supply 50 additional playground supervisors, and from Maj. Ernest W. Brown, police superintendent, to assign eight "light duty" policemen to supervisory work will be accepted.

C. Melvin Sharpe, member of the Board of Education, was named to a subcommittee which will have direct management of the expanded program. He said offices for Barrett will be established in the old Force School on Massachusetts avenue northwest.

Attending yesterday's conference were Hazen, Commissioner Allen, Barrett, Maj. Brown, Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the Board of Education, John Wilson, a board member, Sharpe, Capt. The refunds were:

J. P. Morgan, $338,774; Junius S. Morgan, $45,231; Thomas W. Lamont, $138,783; George Whitney, $44,587; R. C. Leffingwell, $80,254; the late Thomas Cochran, $49,138; estate of the late E. T. Stotesbury, $147,675.

Most of the refunds were due to reclassification of losses on unidentified securities transactions as ordinary business losses instead of capital losses. Until Congress changed the capital gain and loss tax provisions last year, deductions for capital losses were strictly limited.

In the case of J. P. Morgan and a few of the others, part of the refunds also were due to allowance of additional deduction for charitable contributions.

tion will be requested next January.

The Senate retained $229,000 for an 8-room addition to the Ketcham School, and an agreement was reached that the District heads, together with the Board of Education, will make a study of school building needs and report to the next Congress.

Because of an unsettled controversy over the respective sites of the Abbott Vocational School and the Wilson Teachers College, the conferees agreed to eliminate from the bill $50,000 for plans with the understanding that the items will be carried in next year's measure.

The Senate and House also agreed on a 10 per cent limitation for personal services in expending the $900,000 relief appropriation. The House limitation of 8½ per cent had been stricken by the Senate.

The $6,000,000 lump sum appropriation, while $1,750,000 below the original Senate figure, represented a distinctive victory for Senator Overton. It was the first time since 1930 that the Senate had prevailed over the House in any degree in the traditional lump sum tug-of-war.

Senator Bingham (Republican), of Connecticut, was able to boost the Federal contribution in the 1931 supply bill from $9,000,000 to $9,500,000.

Senator Overton said the $6,000,000 compromise was proposed by the House conferees after a consultation with House leaders. He said that Senate conferees accepted it when they became convinced that the House would not agree to $6,500,000 and on account of the serious fiscal situation of the District.

Chairman Collins, of the House sub-committee on District appropriations, told the House that the compromise had been "begrudgingly" accepted because of the critical fiscal situation facing the District government.

He emphasized that the appropriation was for one year only, and he implied that it might be much less next year.

Although House leaders had agreed to support the compromise, the conference report came very near being snagged at the last minute as several members grumbled objections and two points of no quorum were raised only to be withdrawn under persuasion.

Other Figures Cited

Representative Bates (Republican), of Massachusetts, waved a red flag in the face of the recalcitrant members by citing figures on the amount of Federal grants received by States whose Representatives were most outspoken in their opposition to any increase in the contribution to the District.

Mississippi, the home State of the chairman, got $41,000,000 in Federal grants, he said, and paid only $5,100,000 in United States taxes last year. South Dakota, from which another of the conferees came, received $43,000,000 and paid only $1,400,000.

Representative Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, another one of the tax conferees, also gave the House a mild rebuke for agreeing to the $1,000,000 increase "begrudgingly."

After the report had been adopted by a standing vote of 135 to 13, a point of no quorum was raised by Representative Moser (Democrat), of Pennsylvania. Majority Leader Rayburn and Chairman Randolph of the House District Committee, rushed to his side and began arguing with him to withdraw it.

After Moser had withdrawn the point of order, it was raised by Representative Rich (Republican), of Pennsylvania, who had spoken against the report. He withdrew it after Minority Leader Martin had scolded him as members laughed.

Called Up Immediately

Within a quarter of an hour the report was in the Senate, where Senator Overton called it up immediately and passed it under unanimous consent.

Overton also returned the District revenue bill to conference and called a parley for 10:30 a. m. today.

He expressed the opinion that the tax provisions of the compromise revenue bill will not be severely altered although there is likely to be a scrap over the $6,000,000 authorization.

House conferees have indicated they will resist extending the authorization beyond the present fiscal year. Overton is expected to insist that it be made a base for future years to prevent retaliatory action by the House next year.

Despite the loss of $500,000 in anticipated revenue, Auditor Donovan told Senator Overton that he believes the tax bill will produce enough additional money to meet the $48,000,000 appropriations.

The supply bill is $300,000 below the total that was estimated at the time the last tax bill was written.

Upon the basis of a financial statement drafted by Donovan at that time the total expected revenue of the District if the revenue measure becomes a law is $41,770,000. This is only $89,978 below the general revenue fund appropriations.

While the estimated return from the 1-to-3 per cent income tax is $800,000, this figure is probably conservative enough to absorb the $89,978 deficiency.

As calculated by committee clerks, the total of the 1940 District supply bill is $48,002,347. The House bill was $46,915,207 and the Senate appropriations aggregated $49,172,985.

Relief Fund Slashed

The Senate added $959,550 to school appropriations for public buildings and grounds and salvaged only the Ketchum school.

Elimination of the $600,000 relief appropriation added by the Senate brings the figure back to $900,000, which is the same amount expended last year. House conferees were adamant against this increase, and Melvin C. Hazen, president of the Board of Commissioners, in a letter to Overton June 28 advised the Senate to yield. The letter was not released until yesterday.

"The Commissioners have given careful consideration to this matter," the letter said, "and in view of the present status of the District appropriations bill for next year, it is their opinion that the $900,000 should be approved at this time, subject to the condition that the Commissioners may, if such action be deemed advisable, recommend a supplemental appropriation for inclusion in an early deficiency bill in the next session of Congress.

"This conclusion has been reached by the Commissioners primarily for the reason that, beginning July 1, Mr. Otto J. Cass, now deputy administrator of the local WPA, will be appointed superintendent of the Public Assistance Service, and in that capacity will have charge of the administration of relief appropriations."

Many Changes Accepted

"The Commissioners have discussed the matter with Mr. Cass, and he has advised them that it his intention to cause an immediate investigation of the relief case load in the District, as the result of which he will report to the Commissioners before January 1, 1940, whether an appropriation in excess of $800,000 will be required."

The effect of the reduction, however, will be that meanwhile no relief funds will be available for unemployables, for which $300,000 of the Senate's $600,000 had been earmarked.

All of the other Senate amendments, of which there were 137, except the new schools relief, and the lump sum, were agreed to by both the Senate and House prior to July 1.

Senate to Vote Monday on Bill to Ban Movie 'Block-Booking;' Neely Claims Majority

Agreement was reached by the Senate yesterday to vote at 3 p. m. Monday, on the Neely bill to prohibit "block-booking" of motion pictures and permit exhibitors to select individually the films they desire to purchase and exhibit.

SEN. NEELY

Senator Neely (Democrat), of West Virginia, who for a decade has been seeking passage of this legislation, told reporters a majority of the Senate is now in favor of it. "After the Senate passes the bill efforts will be made to obtain House passage," Neely said.

The West Virginiaan told the Senate motion picture exhibitors were required at present by film producers to buy a lot of pictures they don't want in order to obtain those they do desire.

Senator Smith (Democrat), of South Carolina, argued that passage of the Neely bill would "bankrupt one of the greatest and biggest industries in the country."

President Roosevelt nominated Charles W. Eliot, of Massachusetts, yesterday to be director of the National Resources Planning Board, a new consolidated unit formed under the President's reorganization program. To be members of the board he nominated his uncle, Frederic A. Delano, of New York, and Charles E. Merriam, of Illinois.

The Senate passed an Administration bill lifting the $30,000,000,000 limit on the amount of long-term bonds the Treasury may issue under the $45,000,000,000 public debt limit. It was previously passed by the House.

At present the Treasury has nearly $29,000,000,000 outstanding in long-term bonds and nearly $11,000,000,000 in short-term securities.

Chief Justice Hughes said in a letter received at the Supreme Court that he was "very well" and was "enjoying a good vacation." Convalescing from an ulcer, he is vacationing at Franconia, N. H.

The House Interstate Commerce committee approved the Lea railroad-relief bill and plans were made for its consideration by the House next week.

Subject of prolonged consideration by the committee, the bill is designed to aid railroads by providing regulation by the Interstate Commerce Commision of waterway, motor carrier and rail transportation.

The House Agriculture Committee approved a bill extending crop insurance, now limited to wheat, to cotton. A bill designed to tighten up present law whereby the President can impose quotas on foreign products coming into this country if they are likely to interfere with price-raising features of any United States agricultural program, was also given the committee's approval.

Charles Jones Nominated to Appeals Court

Successor to Davis; Appointment Seen as Victory for Guffey

President Roosevelt yesterday nominated Charles Alvin Jones, of Pittsburgh, to be judge of the Third Circuit Court of Appeals, which has jurisdiction over Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Delaware.

Jones will succeed Judge J. Warren Davis, who applied for retirement several weeks ago.

The appointment was taken as a victory for Senator Joseph F. Guffey (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, who was understood to be backing Jones for the position.

Smathers Prefers Senate

Jones was the unsuccessful Democratic nominee for Governor in Pennsylvania's election last year.

Senator William H. Smathers (Democrat), of New Jersey, for some time was reported to be leading the field for the appointment, but last week he notified Attorney General Murphy that he did not desire the judgeship. Earlier, Smathers had declared that he hoped President Roosevelt would run for a third term, in which case, he said, he wanted to be in the Senate, where he could help the campaign, rather than on the bench where he would not be permitted to engage in politics.

Had Smathers been appointed, it was reported Gov. Harry Moore, of New Jersey, was ready to appoint James H. R. Cromwell, husband of the wealthy Doris Duke, to the Senate.

In another judgeship development yesterday, Senator Downey (Democrat), of California, announced he had switched his indorsement for appointment to the Federal District Court for Southern California from Pierson M. Hall to Campbell Beaumont.

The action followed a long deadlock over the position, with the California Democratic faction, headed by former Senator William G. McAdoo, backing Beaumont.

Blow to Musmanno

Downey said he acted at the request of Hall, who asked withdrawal of his name "rather than have the administration of justice suffer from further delay."

Selection of Jones for the circuit judgeship was understood to involve another disappointment for Judge Michael A. Musmanno, whom Guffey had supported for a previous circuit bench vacancy. Reported to have been given reason to expect a voice in selection of the next jurist in that circuit, Guffey, in the meanwhile, was said to have switched his support from Musmanno to Jones.

Pittsburgh Lawyer

Pittsburgh, July 14 (AP).—Charles Alvin Jones is a prominent Pittsburgh lawyer and long-time Democrat. He is 51.

Born at Newport, Perry County, he now lives in fashionable Sewickley, near Pittsburgh.

In the World War he won a citation as an ambulance driver with the French Corps. He had enlisted in the United States naval aviation.

He is a graduate of Mercersburg Academy, Williams College and Dickinson Law School, and is fond of riding, fishing, bowling and golf.

He and his wife, the former Isabella Arrott, are the parents of three children, William, 18; Charles Alvin, jr., 16, and Isabella, 12.

House Votes Down Congress Pension turned with 4 per cent interest.

Ramspeck said that under the plan, a member who had served 15 years and retired at the age of 62, would receive an annual pension of $1,673. His contributions over the 15-year period would total $7,500.

"Let us for once have the courage to do something for ourselves while setting up a social security system for the country," suggested Ramspeck. "I'm not afraid to go back home and face my people on this issue."

Declaring that "we have to spend most of our salary in living and campaign expenses," he said that, in his 10 years in Congress, he knew of "not a single member who has accumulated anything."

He said that after ten years in the House, members find it "very difficult" to re-establish themselves in business. He added that his proposal would make for greater independence among lawmakers.

Bender Opposes

Representative Bender (Republican), of Ohio, however, observed that he "never knew a member of Congress, at least in Ohio, who died in the poorhouse—either there's a place for him in his home town or he can hang up his shingle in Washington and do very well."

Although the bulk of the opposition came from the Republican side, a few Democrats, including Majority Leader Rayburn, voted against the amendment.

Representative Cox (Democrat), of Georgia, charged that "Federal employes constitute a favored class in this country already." He warned his colleagues of "taking advantage of the position of trust we occupy."

To this line of argument, some members replied, in effect, "phooey," and accused their opponents of talking "pure bunk" and showing "lack of courage" in not voting for pensions.

tions leading in armaments and against the interests of peace-loving nations not adequately armed.

A nation disposed toward conquest, he said, may be more tempted to try the fortunes of war if it knows that its less well-prepared opponents would be shut off from those supplies "which, under every rule of international law, they should be able to buy in all neutral countries, including the United States."

To ban shipments of arms while permitting free movement of materials out of which armaments are made and maintained, he contended is completely illogical. He denied that sale of munitions ever led this country into any war. He said arms always have been subject to seizure as contraband, and there is "no reason to suppose that the sale of arms may lead to serious controversy between a neutral and a belligerent."

Continuance of the embargo, rather than absence of one, Hull declared, operates to make this country responsible for a shifting of advantage between two groups of belligerents, and departs from the recognized principle of freedom of neutrals to trade with belligerents.

Far more likely than arms shipments to involve the United States in war, he said, would be the movement of American ships and citizens through danger zones, or the sinking of American ships carrying commodities other than arms. He pointed out that other points in the Administration's program would exclude American nationals from such zones of danger, and would divest Americans of title before any goods were shipped.

Reaction to the message divided along the same lines of cleavage that marked the earlier tug-of-war in the Foreign Relations Committee. Administration Senators, and some isolationists, praised the statement, but there was no immediate evidence any views had been changed.

Chairman Pittman said it was "an unanswerable argument" and said he was especially pleased with "the calm and tolerant manner in which he presented the executive department's opinion of the matter. I am sure it will clarify the subject in the minds of the people of the country." But on the possibility of action by Congress, Pittman was silent.

Borah Is Doubtful

Silent, too, on this point, was Majority Leader Barkley, though he praised the statement as "one that should receive the overwhelming approval of the country."

Senator Borah (Republican), of Idaho, an opposition leader, called it "an excellent statement" from the Administration viewpoint, but asked if sale of arms is neutrality, how that harmonizes with the impatience of certain foreign nations "that we hasten the sale of arms to enable them to carry forward their program while other nations regard sale of our arms as taking sides against them.

"In the present condition of European affairs," he added, "in my opinion the sale of arms will inevitably involve the United States in the present conflict—in the imperialistic war that is either openly or under cover going on in Europe."

Senator Johnson (Republican), of California, another isolationist bloc leader, charged that "the President and Mr. Hull have made crystal clear they prefer England and France and their allies, those great democracies—Russia, Rumania, Poland, Turkey—in case of war, and they will grant them every aid and trust to luck they will overcome their enemies."

Senator Minton, of Indiana, Administration whip, called it "a clear and strong statement" and said, "I for one think we should stay here all summer if necessary to act."

Sentator Thomas (Democrat), of Utah, who favors going farther than Hull and naming aggressor nations, said only: "I hope the message accomplishes its purpose."

Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, commented that existing law had the overwhelming support of the country when it passed and to indict it now "is to indict the whole Congress and the whole body of American public opinion when it was in a position to deal impartially with neutrality two years ago."

Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, who helped direct the Foreign Relations Committee fight for postponement, said "I don't think the mesage will have any effect."

Senator Murray (Democrat), of Montana, lauded the "logic and earnestness" of the Hull statement and said he thought "Congress will be influenced to take action as the result of the message and the sincerity and force of this appeal."

Senator Norris (Independent), of Nebraska, said: "I liked the message. But I don't know whether it is going to do any good or not."

Senator Nye (Republican), of North Dakota, rigid arms ban advocate, said: "It looks like it is all over with. No new arguments were brought into play. Repetittion of old arguments invites a lot of old answers."

Senator Bridges (Republican), of New Hampshire, declared, "Mr. Roosevelt was dissatisfied with the way Prime Minister Chamberlain was handling the European situation and is seeking to take the leadership in international affairs away from him."

U. P. Head Defends Sources

New York, July 14 (U.P.).—Hugh Baillie, president of the United Press, today issued the following statement:

"President Roosevelt yesterday issued a public statement accusing the United Press of falsification of the facts in connection with a reported difference of opinion between himself and Secretary of State Hull over the language of a possible neutrality message to Congress. The United Press story said that Mr. Hull opposed language that might anger the Rome-Berlin axis and further antagonize the Senate. The President's statement said it was false that there had been any disagreement on the language and that he and Mr. Hull had not decided up to that time whether to address any message to Congress on neutrality.

"Today Mr. Roosevelt did send a neutrality message to Congress, in the language of a statement from Secretary Hull.

"The information contained in the United Press yesterday was obtained from Government officials at both ends of Pennsylvania avenue. We regarded those sources as reliable and we regarded the information as news, and still so regard it.

"In the future as in the past and so far as it is humanly within our power to do so the United Press will continue to report the news honestly and objectively, as it develops, without distortion or partisan coloring and without bias or favor."

House Leaders Agree to Press Pay-Hr. Change

Rules Committee to Be Asked to Override Mrs. Norton's Group

By the Associated Press.

House leaders agreed yesterday to take up compromise wage-hour amendments designed to remove certain farm and white collar workers from operation of the law.

They decided that unless the Labor Committee approves the revisions in a day or two, the Rules Committee would be asked to send them to the floor for debate anyway.

Chairman Norton (Democrat), New Jersey, of the Labor Committee, twice tried unsuccessfully this session to bring wage-hour amendments before the House. She said the latest ones, sponsored by Representative Barden (Democrat), North Carolina, a member of her committee, were a "complete departure" from previous decisions of the group.

Indorsed by Farm Blos

She indicated in a statement that there was no chance for Labor Committee consideration until hearings are concluded on amendments to the Wagner labor act.

Barden's amendments were said to have indorsement of the divergent farm blocs which blocked action on the two previous occasions.

He would exempt white-collar workers with a guaranteed salary of at least $150 monthly, provided an employer does not require a minimum work week. Mrs. Norton had proposed a flat $200-a-month exemption.

Broad Farm Exemptions

Barden, like the committee, proposed to exempt telephone exchanges with less than 500 stations and to permit industry committees to recommend lower wage scales for the Virgin Islands and Puerto Rico than the law requires.

The proposed amendments relating to agriculture, however, differ markedly from the committee's proposals.

Barden would exempt these activities from both the wage and hour standards: Dairying (except evaporating and condensing); ginning and compressing of cotton; processing of sugar beets and sugar cane; extraction of oils and juices from fruits and vegetables; first preparation of fresh fruits and vegetables and their canning if a plant does nothing else; livestock marketing; drying, stemming, stripping and tying of leaf tobacco; small sawmills.

U. S. Suspends Rule on Foreign Broadcasts

The Federal Communications Commission yesterday suspended its regulation of international short-wave broadcasts until it determines whether such regulation constitutes censorship.

The regulation required American short-wave stations to transmit only programs "which will reflect the culture of this country and will promote international good will, understanding and co-operation."

Neville Miller, president, National Association of Broadcasters, said the regulation unquestionably opened the way for censorship.

Nazi Countess Escaped Spy Net, Paris Told

2 Newsmen Held as Scare Grows; Society Women Accused

By the United Press.

Paris, July 14.—France's current spy scare was livened today by a report that a beautiful Austrian countess, the brains of German propaganda and espionage oranizations in France, had slipped through a police net and escaped back to Germany just as investigators had obtained proof of her activities.

Two Frenchmen, prominent on Paris newspapers, whose names were said to be Aubin and Poirier, and two men said to be German agents already have been arrested. Twenty more arrests were forecast for this week-end in the famous "second bureau's" effort to crush Nazi underground organizations in France.

Society Women Suspected

French aristocratic circles were rocked by a report that two prominent society women had been employed as paymasters by Otto Abetz, recently expelled German charged with propaganda and espionage activities.

The nation-wide spy hunt neared the point of developing into the greatest scandal since the Stavisky financial scandal which wrecked a cabinet. The newspapers defied the government by ordering their best reporters to break the story wide open as ugly rumors flooded the editorial offices.

Among these was an unconfirmed report that Premier Daladier allegedly told several members of Parliament just before it adjourned for the summer that he had a list of 30 persons he would have shot immediately in the event of war.

Secret Police Busy

One unconfirmed report said that secret police were investigating 150 cases where espionage was suspected.

The Paris Soir injected the Austrian countess into the case today by saying:

"According to an investigation we made this morning, one of two indicated men reportedly made contact with a woman who came to Paris especially several weeks ago. This woman was an Austrian countess who came from Berlin and whom one of the men reportedly introduced into certain circles to which his functions gave him easy access. The principal role reportedly played by this woman, who escaped arrest. She succeeded in leaving France and returned to Germany just as investigators obtained proof of her activities."

Spy Suspect Arraigned

Special Dispatch to The Post

London, July 14.—Exactly a month after the British government demanded the withdrawal of the German consul general at Liverpool because of espionage activities, additional evidence of the work of the Nazi spy system in Great Britain came to light today in Richmond police court, where Donald Owen Reginald Adams, 56, was charged under the official secrets act with selling to Nazi agents details of the British 4.5-inch antiaircraft gun and other information "useful to an enemy."

The sewing project is in a brick building at Second avenue north and Second street, on the edge of the business district.

The rioting broke out a few minutes after 7 p. m. (C. S. T.), as 100 women began walking from the building. They were greeted by yells of "scab," and "traitor."

Almost instantly firing began as gas bombs exploded in the street, driving back crowds which had been milling about the scene all day.

Women screamed. Officers shouted commands. Guns barked. Bricks and stones caromed from the sides of buildings.

Several of the police directed fire from riot guns at the roofs of buildings across the street.

As the shooting continued, officers with drawn guns herded the women workers along the sidewalk, taking a course opposite to that used earlier in the afternoon when police fired guns to disperse pickets who rushed an armored car amid shouts of "Tip it over!"

Gun squads converged on the riot scene again two hours after tonight's outbreak. Policemen, with guns pointed, scattered groups of men milling about the scene.

The new disturbance developed when rocks were hurled through windows of the sewing project building. Several hand-to-hand clashes resulted. The shirt was torn from one policeman. At least one arrest was made.

The demonstration first gathered at the project, focal point of the strike for shorter work hours that has tied up virtually all Minneapolis WPA projects, as the second shift reported for duty shortly after the noon hour. Police had opened picket lines so the first shift could go to work.

As 215 women employes to be relieved left the building, 45 patrolmen formed a line along the sidewalk. Several armored police cars followed the retiring workers in the street. The crowd closed around the first car.

Shouting, "Tip it over!" pickets seized the running boards and fenders of the vehicle. At that, police fired several tear gas bombs into the throng.

Scores of the strikers staggered, choking, from the street. The armored car went through. A woman was trampled in the rush to flee from the gas, two policemen and a bystander were gassed. A second woman was injured in the jostling, and a spectator fell, suffering a head injury.

While the fumes sent most of the crowd scurrying away, the afternoon shift of workers dashed into the project building.

One arrest was made in connection with the incident. Police took into custody Margaret Schoenfeld, 23. She was booked without charge and marked "held for FBI."

First British Conscripts to Start Training

Thousands Due In Camps as London Shows Her Might

By the Associated Press

London, July 14.—Britain's first peacetime conscript army will be mustered tomorrow, when thousands of youths report to begin six months' compulsory training in the nation's rapidly expanding defense forces.

The first group of 20-year-olds to be called up under the new conscript law will go to training centers tomorrow. By Monday, about 30,000 are expected to be in uniform. The number will be increased gradually to 200,000 as the remainder of the class is called.

Departure From Policy

While this number is small, compared with the territorial army of nearly 500,000, its creation marks an important departure from Britain's traditional policy of volunteer service.

It is regarded generally as the most significant step the government has taken in demonstrating what its leaders call its determination to halt aggression.

An extension of the conscription movement was seen in an announcement that the Hongkong government had prepared for publication tomorrow an ordinance making all non-Chinese male British subjects in the crown colony between 18 and 55 liable to service.

It was believed about 500 men between 18 and 40 would be placed under training by the ordinance. Older men are expected to form an organization to operate public services and perform other essential duties in wartime.

The mustering of conscripts comes at the end of a week designed to show Britain is prepared for any eventualities.

Tokyo Throngs Rush Embassy

aharu Honma, Japanese commander in the North China port, declared:

"The British are facing a serious decision whether to co-operate with Japan in China or lose utterly her vast investment there."

Honma's statement, distributed by Domei, Japanese news agency, asserted that on the one hand, it was impossible to foresee the results of the Tokyo conversations, but that, on the other hand, he had "a clear vision of what the outcome might be."

"Therefore," he added, "complete preparations already have been made for the second phase of restrictions on the British concession.

"The British appear insistent over a trivial matter and, if they continue thus, it is inevitable that the Tokyo parleys will fail."

The Japanese commander concluded with the declaration "Officers and men of the Japanese army are ardently supported by a hundred million Japanese, who are determined to go ahead until objectives at Tientsin are realized."

The blockade of the British and French concessions at Tientsin started June 14, when the Japanese demanded the British hand over four alleged Chinese terrorists. Their demand was broadened to include British "co-operation" in the Japanese establishment of a "new order in East Asia" and cessation of Britain's "pro-Chiang Kai-shek attitude."

Kaifeng to Be Evacuated

London, July 14 (INS).—Japanese authorities at Peiping today issued an ultimatum to British residents of Kaifeng, ordering them to evacuate the city within four days, a Reuter's dispatch said tonight. The reason was not stated.

Earlier the Domei (Japanese) news agency reported British residents were preparing to move because of anti-British feeling in the city.

Kaifeng, the capital of Honan Province in North Central China, thus appeared to be taking its place with Tientsin, Tsaingtao and Kulangsu as a sore spot of Anglo-Japanese friction.

Bastille Day Observed Here In Party at French Embassy

150th Anniversary of French Revolution's Start Commemorated by Hundreds of Nationals, Friends in Champagne Toasts

The popping of champagne corks and a ripple of animated conversation under the trees behind the French embassy yesterday afternoon was Washington's recognition of a landmark in the history of democracy—the 150th anniversary of the fall of the Bastille.

On July 14, 1789, the grim fortress-prison, a frowning symbol of absolutism, was stormed by revolting Paris, and the great French revolution began. Yesterday, 150 years after, about 300 Frenchmen, friends of France, and Americans of French ancestry, gathered at the embassy to toast the President of France and the President of the United States, and chat amiably.

A brief speech of welcome by Jaques Truelle, counselor of the embassy, reminded the guests of the significance of the occasion.

"One this American soil, where we enjoy the most liberal and generous hospitality, we never cease to think of our own country," he said. "France today, like other nations, goes through difficult times, but it is in adversity that people are tested, and once more our country is showing herself equal to her task."

M. Truelle received in the absence of the ambassador, Count de Saint-Quentin, who was attending the Bastille Day celebration at the New York World's Fair. Mr. Truelle was assisted by the vice consul, Andre Fiot.

Among the French who came to reminisce about their homeland and the Americans who came to taste the patisseries and the baba au rhum their parents had talked about, one Englishman was much in evidence. C. M. G. Mallet, counselor of the British Embassy, dropped in for a friendly visit, not an official call.

Profit-Making Not a Crime, Taft Declares

Assails New Deal In Institute Debate With Rep. Smith

By the Associated Press

Charlottesville, Va., July 14.—Representative T. V. Smith (Democrat, Illinois), sharing the same platform with Senator Robert A. Taft (Republican, Ohio), in a discussion of party views, said tonight the maxim, "private office is a public trust" is the "very key to the Democratic administration during these trying years."

This maxim of the New Deal, Smith contended, would, if observed, transform "the mercenary motivation of industrialism into a philosophy of the common good."

Assails New Deal

Senator Taft, presenting the Republican point of view, at University of Virginia Institute of Public Affairs, criticized New Deal spending and asserted prosperity could be restored, but not "by Government regulation of agriculture and commerce and industry."

Taft, who had been engaging in a series of debates over he radio with Smith, argued tonight that present laws need modification, and "above all, the laws must be administered with the constant effort to encourage the development of private industry.

"There must be a recognition of the fact," he added, "that the making of profits is not a crime; that the average business man, making a success in his own business, is an essential cog in the national machine, and ought to be encouraged, as long as it does not cost the taxpayer any money."

Critices Lending Plan

Taft asserted the present lending program of the Government "is even more dangerous than the spending program, for it removes the spending entirely from the control of the appropriations committees of House and Senate, which even in these generous days retain a certain hard-boiled attitude." The Barkley bill, he said, "is merely a smokescreen for billions of uncontrolled Federal spending."

Smith contended the national debt "will itself be borne as a public trust until it can be repaid from the earned income of a prosperity rising on the foundations of justice.

"This acceptance of all private offices as touched with public interest is the new imperative that is laid upon modern men by the inexorable march of events at home and abroad."

Daladier Calls Army Invincible

gan in Paris 150 years ago today with the fall of the Bastille.

Fifty feet below the huge flag-draped platform from which the premier spoke sat native rulers, sultans and princes from all the empire. Flanking them were rank after rank of native troops in their colorful uniforms.

Peace Applause Greatest

After Daladier finished his warning of France's armed might and pledged her efforts for peace, President Lebrun read a brief message to the empire. Replies came from picked civilians in France and her possessions, including the commander of the liner Normandie, midway between France and the United States.

Great as were the cheers which greeted Daladier's proclamation of the strength of France's army, there was even louder approval of his declaration that France wanted only peace.

He was forced to wait several minutes for the applause to die down when he said in measured tones:

"We menace no one.

"We deram of no conquest. We desire only peace among all people and we have the firm will to concentrate our efforts to protect it in that loyalty and that spirit of human collaboration which alone can save civilization."

Planes From U. S. Parade

In telling the French they were protected from danger, the premier referred to the morning's parade with the advice:

"Remember the display of our armored cars, of the speedy rolling fortresses with their cannon and machine-guns. Remember the sailors who represented among us the heroic crews of our squadrons which watch day and night over the ocean routes. Remember also the appearance of our intrepid air force."

In the first display of air power, 100 French and 52 British planes appeared; they were followed by a fleet of 250 French aircraft, including 57 fighters purchased recently in the United States.

The 450 British soldiers in the parade along the Champs Elysees had a place of honor behind students of military schools and after them came the cream of the French army.

Rolling Bomb Shelters

There were troops of all colors and parts of the empire—Moroccans, Spahis, Algerians, Tunisians, Senegalese, Zouaves and Indo-Chinese.

Parisian firemen exhibited for the first time the city's new "rolling bomb shelters"—heavily armored trucks sealed against gas and with enough room for 50 persons.

Every city in France held its own parade and celebration. A detachment of United States bluejackets from the cruiser Trenton marched in the Le Havre parade and received an ovation.

Roosevelt Sends Greeting

President Roosevelt, on the occasion of Bastille Day, sent to President Albert Lebrun of France this message:

"On this great anniversary which the people of France are celebrating today, I take pleasure in tendering to Your Excellency, on behalf of the people of the United States and in my own name, sincere congratulations and earnest wishes for the continued peace and prosperity of the republic."

He Needs Blood—Will You Help?

Hope still shines from the eyes of 3-year-old William Caddle, although he is seriously ill in Children's Hospital from leukemia, a disease in which the white blood cells multiply abnormally. Since he entered the hospital Wednesday, William has received three transfusions, his mother, Mrs. James Caddle, being the donor. Yesterday she appealed to The Post to help find some other donors. His blood is Type 3, most uncommon of all, which complicates the transfusion problem

Woman Midget Is Drowned In Bathtub by Crazed Man

Laborer, Given to Tirades Over Social Inequalities, Out of Work, Strangles Her Over Efforts to Quiet Him Down

New York, July 14 (U.P.).—A naked madman seized a woman neighbor and drowned her in his bathtub today, then collapsed and died of a heart attack after struggling with police.

The victim was Miss Elizabeth Schneider, 55, who, because she was only 4 feet tall and weighed 90 pounds, once performed with a troupe of midgets. The mad slayer was Walter Ferguson, 190-pound laborer, given to tirades against social inequalities and his unemployment.

Neighbors said he had appeared unbalanced for the last nine months, after he was beaten while working as a strikebreaker at a paper plant.

Ferguson was preparing to take a bath in his meagerly furnished, $12-a-month tenement flat. He was alone, but his haranguing shouts were audible throughout the building.

Miss Schneider, in her flat above, could hear him plainly. At last she went down and tapped on his door.

"Walter, be quiet," she called. "Stop making so much noise."

Sam Fox, an insurance premium collector, who chanced to be in the building, saw the naked man open the door, grab Miss Schneider and drag her inside.

Fox lunged into the flat and saw Ferguson holding the woman in the bathtub, her screams trailing into gurgles. He attacked Ferguson, but was no match for the madman's strength. Flung off, he called police.

Batter Down Door

Patrolmen John Campbell and William Moore responded in a radio car. They found Ferguson's door locked and his victim's screams growing weaker. In response to their pounding, Ferguson shouted:

"Jesus Christ himself couldn't get in here."

But the officers battered down the door. They burst into the flat and saw Ferguson holding the woman's head under water, gripping her throat.

Ferguson snatched up a table and hurled it at the policemen. They cornered him, but he struggled for several minutes, his abnormal strength equal to theirs.

Suddenly, he went limp. When an ambulance arrived, the doctor said Ferguson died of heart disease.

The battered policemen lifted Miss Schneider from the tub and applied artificial respiration. An emergency squad brought a pulmotor, but could not resuscitate her.

Ferguson moved into the flat two years ago, when he came to New York from Detroit.

Solon Mills, Ill., July 14.—The battered body of a youth believed to be a University of Kansas graduate was found on a country road today and police investigated a report he may have been kidnaped and slain by a fugitive from an Oklahoma prison.

The victim was identified tentatively as Billy S. Hamilton, 23, Arkansas City, Kan. He had been shot through the head and his forehead was battered.

Arkansas City police said that Hamilton, who traveled in Eastern Kansas, may have been kidnaped and murdered by Jack Russell, a fugitive from the Oklahoma prison. Russell escaped from the prison Tuesday and the next day kidnaped C. E. Brown, McAlester, Okla., photographer, near Pittsburg, Kans.

Italians Deny Leasing of Trieste To Germany

Special Cable to The Post.

Rome, July 14.—Gategorical denial of reports published abroad of the leasing of the Italian port of Trieste to Germany was issued here today.

The reports appeared to have their point of origin in negotiations which have been going on for some time regarding the status of the free zone of Trieste, which was enjoyed by Austria up to the time of the anschluss in March, 1938, and the special port privileges appertaining to Czecho-Slovakia before its absorption.

Continuance of traffic from central Europe is of utmost importance to Trieste. In 1937, out of 2,300,000 tons of exports, 1,200,000 originated in Austria and Czecho-Slovakia.

Breezy Comedy Holds Screen At the Met.

'Kid From Kokomo' Proves Field Day For May Robson

"THE KID FROM KOKOMO." Warner Brothers picturization of an original story by Dalton Trumbo, adapted to the screen by Jerry Wald and Richard Macaulay, with Pat O'Brien, Joan Blondell, Wayne Morris, May Robson, Jane Wyman, Stanley Fields, Maxie Rosenbloom, Sidney Toler, Ed Brophy, Winifred Harris, Morgan Conway, John Ridgely, Ward Bond and Paul Hurst. Directed by Lewis Seiler. Reviewed Friday afternoon. At the Metropolitan Theater.

When a corn-fed young prize fighter gets hooked up with a Broadway mob, anything can happen—and does. "The Kid From Kokomo," currently at the Metropolitan, is packed with the slap-happy doings incurred in such a partnership.

Wayne Morris, the kid from Kokomo, is yanked from a serene companionship with cows and chickens by a Broadway fight promoter without a fighter. After seeing Wayne bounce around a few unmannerly yokels, the promoter (played by Pat O'Brien) scents a big-money prospect. The farm boy doesn't want to be a fighter, but is lured by the prospect that publicity will enable him to discover his long-lost mother. But pugilistic success doesn't help him to locate his dear mother. He packs up to go back to the farm. Promoter O'Brien is fit to be tied. But he refuses to be licked by a missing mama. Boldly, he announces to Wayne that he's located the sought-for parent. Then he goes down to night court, finds a bedraggled old shoplifter, dresses her up in lavender and old lace and gives her a sketchy coaching in how a mother should behave.

Miss Robson Steals Show

Right here is where that seasoned old trouper, May Robson, sails in and completely steals the show. Her role somewhat resembles the one she had in "Lady For a Day," but is more ribald and outspoken. She makes horrid faces over the milk her dear "son" brings her, keeps a bottle of gin under her pillow. Her Whistler mother costume is discarded in nothing flat. She and her lad move into a penthouse where the old dame, in satin negligees and hung with jewelry, spends most of her time telephoning to bookmakers. The fight promoter has a feminine Frankenstein on his hands. The pay-off comes when the promoter tries to unmask the old lady reprobate by bringing in one of her old boy friends. She trumps his ace by introducing the O. B. F. to her "son" as his father.

Naturally, the "Kid From Kokomo" includes various good fights, of the formal, informal and general rough-house types. Wayne Morris and "Slapsie Maxie" Rosenbloom tangle a couple of times and there is one huge free-for-all between a bunch of modern gangsters and an old-time crew of thugs from Hell's Kitchen.

May Robson holds the show in the palm of her hand every minute she's on the screen. As the rapscallion old hag of a shoplifter, facing the judge, she's practically classic; does the best bit she's ever brought to the screen. Wayne Morris' role is implicit with the thought that he's a sentimental lunkhead. But he does the part with such simplicity and boyishness that it's very pleasant. Pat O'Brien's part is tailored to order for him. The same goes for Joan Blondell, as Pat's girl friend, an ex-bubble dancer. Jane Wyman proves a cute trick in the slight role of Wayne's fiancee.

Good Character Work

Good character work is turned in by Stanley Fields, as the battered boy friend of Miss Robson's heyday; Sidney Toler, as a judge, and Edward Brophy, as a trainer. Maxie Rosenbloom does all right by himself, too, especially in the sequence where he bats Wayne's ears down, but he doesn't have quite as much of a comedy opportunity as he could use.

"The Kid From Kokomo" is no wonder picture, but it's a breezy charade, good for an hour or so of diversion. It should mop up in the neighborhoods.

Wimpy masquerades as Pop-Eye in a cartoon comedy better than the average. A Floyd Gibbons adventure deals with boiler explosions. The newsreel is a bit overbalanced with war preparations, but (wonder of wonders!) there isn't a single airplane in it. Gayest bits are those of a grandmas' beauty contest and Charlie MacCarthy taking a couple of verbal falls out of Mayor La Guardia and Grover Whalen.

MARY HARRIS.

Palace

Picturized with great delicacy and sensitiveness and acted with a degree of skill that has rarely, if ever, been achieved on the screen, "Goodbye, Mr. Chips," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's film version of the James Hilton novelette, will continue to charm theater-goers through a second week at Loew's Palace Theater.

It hardly seems necessary at this time to say again that "Goodbye, Mr. Chips," traces the lifetime devotion to his profession of a tutor in an English school for boys, or that Robert Donat, in the title role, brings to his visualization of the character an unbelievable fidelity to every period of Mr. Chipping's life from the age of 20 to 83. Mr. Donat's performance is one of the perfectly cut gems of character delineation of which the cinema should be most proud.

Despite the fact that the story of "Mr. Chips" is told largely within the walls of Brookfield, steeped in British honor and tradition, the dramatic narrative possesses unflagging interest and a peculiar sprightliness that comes as a complete surprise. Three generations of the same families pass under the Brookfield portals to Mr. Chips' tutelage. Each finds him a more softened, more human and more companionable man than the one that had gone before. And there is romantic interest, too, in the middle passages of the drama, that are lent a tender and gracious touch by Greer Garson, whose portrayal of Kathie would match Mr. Donat's remarkable portraiture were the opportunities comparable.

The entire supporting cast and huge ensemble of adolescent youths, as a matter of fact, contribute their full share to the superlative excellence of a film play that takes rank with the finest ever projected upon a screen. Among the juveniles, first honors go to Master Terry Kilburn, to whose lot falls the honor of speaking the "tag-line" of the play, "Goodbye, Mr. Chips."

Not to see "Mr. Chips" is to deny oneself the pleasure of witnessing one of the few pictures that bear witness to the fact that the cinema is an art.

'They All Come Out,' at Capitol, Goes Behind Scenes in Our Prisons

Shows Both Sides Of Crime Story Through Able Cast; 'Crazy' Stage Revue

"THEY ALL COME OUT." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of an original story and screen play by John C. Higgins, featuring Rita Johnson, Tom Neal and Bernard Nedell, with Edward Gargan, John Gallaudet, Addison Richards, Frank M. Thomas, George Tobias, Ann Shoemaker and Charles Lane. Directed by Jacques Tourneur. Previewed Tuesday, July 11. At Loew's Capitol Theater.

Although preceded and followed by a few explanatory words by former Attorney General Homer S. Cummings and James V. Bennett, director of the Federal Bureau of Prisons, thus creating the impression that the primary purpose of the film is to point a lesson, "They All Come Out" has much more than "propaganda" to hold out to the amusement seeker. The current screen attraction at Loew's Capitol Theater is a thrilling gangster picture which loses little of its excitement after it moves behind prison walls.

BELL

The career in crime of a typical gang of hoodlums is taken as the basis of the story. They are cracking safes right and left, making large hauls of "easy money" and getting away with it—until the Federal authorities, in addition to the local police, get on their trail. They are, of course, trapped and brought to trial. Prison sentences of from two to 20 years are doled out and the gang is split up into their respective cells. The dramatic forcefulness of the picture is sustained in prison sequences by rigid adherence to the innate traits of character of the individual members of "Reno" Madigan's tight little syndicate of felons.

Adheres To Character

The boy and girl in the case, like their mentor, at first are rebellious and resent everything that the authorities attempt to do for them to make life easier and shorten their terms. Madigan, a hardened jailbird, is intent only on defiance of the law and engineering a jail-break. His attitude never wavers, but, in time, Kitty and Joe Cameron begin to realize that the means of complete rehabilitation are at their disposal. They learn valuable occupations while serving their time and leave the prison gates prepared to earn their own way as useful citizens. "Groper" Crane, suffering from embryonic paranoia, is restored to mental health and "Bugs" Jacklin also sees the light and is re-united with his family.

The picture ends with Madigan sent to "The Rock" as a hardened criminal beyond redemption and Joe and Kitty involved in another bit of gangsterism that might have been their undoing, except for the complete change in viewpoint they have acquired while theoretically behind the bars—both came to be "trusties."

"They All Come Out" is not in any sense a "big" picture, although the "moral" it seeks to impart is an important and a valuable one. The various prison regimes may or may not have been a little idealized. Certainly the transgressions of the law by Madigan and his followers have not been. They possess all of the blood-and-thunder elements of the most violent "cops and robbers" melodrama.

Is Well Acted

The piece is extremely well played by a cast that boasts no "names" but has the advantage of some excellent actors. Foremost among these are Bernard Nedell, who limns a sinister portrait of a man gone completely anti-social, as Madigan; Tom Neal, as the youngster who was led into a wild life of crime when he was so hungry he would do anything to eat, and Rita Johnson, as Kitty, the "gun moll," who got into robbery and murder deeper than she intended. Edward Gargan, as "Bugs;" John Gallaudet, as "Groper," and George Tobias, as "Sloppy Joe" all contribute picturesque character studies of varying types of criminals. The fores of justice are ably impersonated by Addison Richards, Frank M. Thomas and numerous others.

On the stage at the Capitol this week they are putting on what is euphemistically termed "The Crazy Show." It derives its name principally from the lunatic antics of Milt Britton and his insane band, whose musical dementia already is widely known to Washingtonians. Mr. Britton and his crew are as crazy as ever.

Some Were Sane

The Reillys, three boys and a girl, seemed to these eyes a little frenzied in their dancing, but still safely on the sane side. Fague Springman, a local baritone, was decidedly normal in his use of a splendid voice in "Mandalay," "Water Boy" and "Annie Laurie" and Paul Nolan, a juggler in the Stan Kavanagh manner, was only slightly off his nut and not at all off his juggling. Sue Ryan may have been a little on the daffy side in her music hall impressions, but they brought down the house as they deserved to do.

"Montmartre Madness," a musicalette, with the inevitable can-can and Apache dances; a Terrytoon comedy, "The Prize Guest," and the Fox Movietone News augment a feature that should scare no patron away merely because it is dedicated to the United States Department of Justice.

Many Arts, Crafts Work on "Oz' Film

More than 165 arts and crafts were represented in the making of "The Wizard of Oz." These included workers never before employed in a studio. Among the crafts are glass workers, color mixers, cellophane experts, a sky writer, powder and firemen, magicians to invent tricks, high voltage experts, water tinters, hedge trimmers, noise creators, beard dyers, lightning workers and men who painted pictures with strips of felt.

One Whom the Prison Reformed

versatile young actress, who appears in the principal feminine role in "They All Come Out," currently on the screen at Loew's Capitol Theater. A story of gangsterism and the Federal penal system, this subject also boasts fine performances by Bernard Nedell and Tom Neal, with an excellent cast in support

Rathborne, the socialites who were stranded in mid-air for five hours, during the parachute ride at the World's Fair Wednesday night, already have received their first offer to exploit their experiences . . . The offer came from Bennett Cerf, head of Random House, who observed the rescue work. He shouted his offer to the suspended couple—an offer to publish a book to be called: "My Five Hours in a Stalled Parachute!"

Holdover Bill Scores Again At the Earle

'Daughters,' on Screen, And Skating Revue Continue in Favor

The triumph of financial security over love in a cottage, which is the wordly, material philosophy of "Daughters Courageous," has been so complete that the outwardly homespun film yesterday began a second week at the Earle. The colorful "Lake Placid Ice Show" also is held over on the stage.

It goes without saying that, of its kind, "Daughters Courageous" is a very well-made film. One might suspect it of being even more admirable than last season's "Four Daughters," for besides the charmingly youthful Lane sisters and Gale Page, as the young things of the title, there is an added role for that excellent performer, Fay Bainter. John Garfield, Claude Rains, Jeffrey Lynn, May Robson, Frank McHugh and Dick Foran are other familiar faces.

But when the wealthy man, who wants to marry the mother of the four girls, is welcomed so joyously into the family, not so much for himself, but for the dramatic school tuition he is willing to pay for one of the girls and the vice-presidency of a company that he offers one of their sweethearts, then a curious film philosophy arises.

An Enoch Arden Story

All would have been well, if 20 years before, the father of this lovely quartet had not had the wanderlust. He had simply gotten tired of it all and wandered away, leaving his wife to support the youngsters. It was no easy road for this twentieth century Mrs. Enoch Arden, but she became a dress designer, held on to the salty-tongued, family cook and knuckled down to it.

She did a good job. She is about to marry a sturdy and provident family friend, with her daughters' unanimous permision, when the stray husband reappears. After the first jolt, the girls learn to like him. He is helpful and charming. With the youngest, Buff, he is sympathetic towards her affection for a romantic do-nothing, very much like he himself had been. There is no doubt as to the depth of love between these two young people. Before the cinematic advent of John Garfield and this strange consciousness of material comfort, the two youngsters would have defied wordly ease and set up shop in a one-room cabin. Now, they part.

Ice Carnival Remains Tops

The excellence of the film's casting is largely responsible for natural interest in the situation. John Garfield, whether or no one may tire of the tough luck the lonely fellow seems fated for, is real and vivid as the wrong boy for the fresh and youthful Priscilla Lane. The sympathetic playing of Donald Crisp, as the wealthy suitor, makes the problem a more natural and likely one and Fay Bainter's characterization of the lady who has had such a really tough time is unobtrusively clever.

The Earle's stage, coated with synthetic ice, is the bright setting for an anti-seasonal revue, "Lake Placid Ice Show." Brunet and Joly, Olympic Champions, float gracefully on their silver skates and Ted Meza proves an expert ice comedian. Al Clark is a hefty fellow, who scores with his barrel jumping and Sonia and Margo are two smooth ice experts. In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., July 14.—(Mack Sennett, who has returned to the industry he helped found, as technical adviser and actor in "Falling Stars," a cavalcade of Hollywood from 1913 to 1927, did this piece for me and it's a pip—H. H.)

By Mack Sennett

Out of the past comes to mind a story you probably never heard before, Hedda, but it doubtless was an experience your famous husband, DeWolf Hopper, never forgot.

Way back in New York before I got into movies, I'd been singing in church choirs and doing odd jobs for a living. Spring cleaning is a big thing in the East and I answered an add asking for house painters.

Although I never had a brush in my hand before, I applied for and got a job and was taken immediately to a fashionable apartment on Seventh avenue at Fifty-fourth street. How I needed the money, and the job paid $3.50 a day.

The boss painter showed me the place and then left me in charge, with a big brush and a bewildering assortment of paint cans. I started at the kitchen, worked right through, room after room, slapping paint on in awkward fashion, with big gobs slopping on the floor.

When I was finishing the front room the boss painter entered the kitchen. His progress through the house was marked with rising crescendo. When he hit the library he almost had a stroke. Not till then did I remember his admonition to skip that room; instead I painted it like the rest.

But I got my three and one-half bucks and left him a fit subject for a straitjacket.

If DeWolf Hopper ever hated painters, it was because of me. That was his apartment. But in spite of this we became good friends later.

Four years later when D. W. Griffith, Thomas H. Ince and I formed the Triangle Film Company, at the peak of the silent era, we made "Don Quixote" and starred DeWolf Hopper, responsible for me ever going to Motion pictures were just gaining a toe hold and the theater, fearing new competition, notified all actors they couldn't return to the stage if they dared to work for any film outfit.

I started working for Biograph, as property boy, laboren, actor, finally became a director. I was on top of the world and making $35 a week! It was wonderful!

Then I got to betting on horses. I lost, of course. I owed the bookies $100. They came around, demanding their long-overdue money. I started talking pictures then and asked them to put up $2,500 to start a motion picture company. They screamed murder at this, demanding that I first pay them the $100 I owed. But their gambling instincts had been appealed to and before long they raked together $2,500.

We needed a name for our new outfit. When a Pennsylvania train thundered by the building I noticed the Keystone emblem on each car.

"Keystone," I said, "will be our company's name. If it's good enough for the Pennsylvania Railroad, it's good enough for us."

And stranger than fiction, only six years after I'd talked to Marie Dressler in Northampton, I hired her at $2,500 a week—highest price ever paid up 'til then in movies—to play "Tillie's Punctured Romance," which I wrote, directed and financed with my last dime. Charlie Chaplin was in it, too, at $150 a week. It was a smash success and earned millions.

Louella O. Parsons

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, July 14, (1939).—Doris Nolan, who checked her movie career in favor of the stage, on which she was far more successful, has just signed a new contract with Universal. She starts there Monday in "One Hour to Live" and this time gets a better break, I am told, than in her first one, "Top of the Town," which didn't do U. Very much good, or Doris, either. She made three for Charles Rogers and "Holiday" for Columbia, before she decided her place was behind the footlights.

LOUELLA PARSONS

However, that's all ancient history and Doris is a pretty girl and a good actress when she gets the chance, so maybe "One Hour to Live" is the turning point in her screen career. Meanwhile, her boy friend, Gregory La Cava, is preparing "February Hill," which he will produce for RKO under the title "The Primrose Path," its stage moniker.

Just a few minutes before George Raft took the train for New York today he met with Jack Warner and Hal Wallis and signed an exclusive Warner ticket. George will do no more Universal or other outside movies unless he is loaned. Apparently, he gets along better with the W. B. clan than he did at Para. While in New York he will make a personal appearance with "Each Dawn I Die," which, according to those who have seen the sneak preview, is his best picture since "Scarface." He sails on the Normandie for Europe. Virginia Peine, with whom he reconciled a few weeks ago, is already beginning to look sad at his departure. "The Patent Leather Kid" will be waiting for his return as his first.

Charlie Bickford follows Spencer Tracy and Pat O'Brien in the guise of a screen priest, when he steps into "Murder in the Big House," based on the Colorado State Prison break in 1929. At that time, Father Patrick O'Neil helped stop the rioting at the risk of his life and was subsequently awarded the Carnegie Medal for bravery. This story, which Monogram will produce, is Father O'Neil's own account of the break. He will be on hand to help supervise, much in the same way Father Flanagan did on "Boys Town." Barton MacLane gets a top spot in the cast, with William Night directing.

Wheather Claudette Colbert or Henry Fonda like to turn out camp lights by 11 p. m. or not, John Ford is playing a strict disciplinarian at the "Drums Along the Mohawk" location camp in Utah. With 300 people in "Camp Drums," Ford has to have some semblance of law and order, or they'd never get the picture finished on schedule. Rules are plenty stringent and, just to make sure everyone adheres to them, Jack has appointed a governing committee of a half-dozen brawny gents to police the camp. Fines are imposed on the law-breakers and the same rules go for the big stars on the jaunt as the extras.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at Random: Edmund Lowe's car was completely demolished today in an accident, but by some miracle he escaped with only a few scratches and minor bruises; Bob Taylor has been interviewing jewelry salesmen for three weeks to try to find something different for Barbara's birthday tomorrow; Bob Cummings flew his own plane to Wichita today to buy himself a new ship; Allan Jones sings in four languages when he appears with the Portland Philharmonic Orchestra the 31st; Paula Stone and her bridesmaids, Anne Shirley, Natalie Draper Brown and Patricia Ellis, have been meeting at Sardi's for luncheon every day to plan their wedding costumes. Paula and Duke Daly take their vows tomorrow afternoon and later, over 100 of their friends will help them cut the wedding cake at Fred Stone's house.

Dick Powell and Charlie Winninger settling the affairs of the other world at luncheon; Benny Rubin, my ancient enemy, is the new manager of Victor Hugo's. He invites me to come up and see him sometime, but how do I know he won't put soap in my soup? Mrs. George Archainbaud hostess at a luncheon for Bebe Daniels today and the Skeets Gallaghers dining Bebe and Ben with a corned beef and cabbage soiree on cooks night out; 'tis Max Factor who is making Charles Laughton's extraordinary wigs, while Perc is doing the make-up; Hollywood is all warmed up for the big baseball game between the comedians and leading men tomorrow at Wrigley Field.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Columbia

"Tarzan Finds a Son" can be recommended for the entire family. The grownups will laugh indulgently at the spectacle of a herd of elephants, guided by monkeys, coming to the rescue of the dastards who would have done evil to the small edition of Tarzan. The youngsters will get a vicarious thrill from seeing a boy swing by his heels from a high rope and perform stunts in miniature just like Tarzan's.

Tarzan and Jane adopt a babay left over from a plane crash. His relatives come to claim him. Jane thinks they are fine folk. Tarzan merely says "Go" and go they do when their evil work is done.

Cheetah, the ape, is still star comedian of the adventures and the elephants, lions, tigers, panthers, and so forth, still obey the queer Tarzan gutterals. Tarzan has developed in social graces and added a few new words to his vocabulary, but civilization has not further laid tarnishing fingers upon him.

A "Crime Does Not Pay" short deals with racketeers among those who search through the help-wanted columns of the Nation's newspapers. It is clean-cut and moral-pointing without being persnickity. Peanuts and bees are the subjects of a miniature dealing with a delightful soul who indulges all his stray caprices about how he would like to earn his living. In the newsreel are clips from Poland and a hilarious view of the launching of another "life-saving device." It sinks before it is launched!

Jobs for 3,915 In June Sets Record Here

Employment Center Reports Placements At High in Month

A total of 3,915 jobs filled by the District of Columbia Employment Center during June puts placement activities at the highest level in the history of the service, Director C. E. Lamson reported yesterday. The June figures mark an increase of 67.5 per cent over June of last year.

Placements in private industry reached a new high for June, with a total of 3,251, an increase of 46.8 per cent over June, 1938. It was the tenth consecutive month an increase has been recorded over the corresponding month of the preceding year, Lamson said.

The highest percentage of increase in job placements during June was established by the hotel and restaurant divisions, with an increase of 102.8 per cent, Lamson said. Industrial and building trades placements increased 100.6 per cent. The greatest volume of placements was in domestic and service employment.

Lamson credited the American Legion with aiding in the job increase with its campaign to find gainful employment for competent men and women over 40 years of age. All jobs obtained through the American Legion have been filled through the District Employment Center, he said.

D. C. Man Killed In Tropic Triangle

bration of Bastille Day, the French holiday, had been held.

Mrs. Watson said her affair with Love began when they met on board ship en route here from New York some months ago. He suggested later she get a divorce from Watson in order to be free to marry him, the American woman said.

Slapped Other Woman

When she demurred, she said, Love wrote her husband explaining the situation and asking that he seek a divorce. Thereafter she left her home in Balboa and came here to join Love, she said. Her story continued:

A month ago Love tired of her and suggested that she return to her husband. Humiliated and without funds, she refused. Finally she explained to her husband, who booked passage for her to leave for the United States next week.

She was quoted as saying she asked Love not to go out with other women during her few remaining days here. It was a great shock to her when she saw him enter the Union Club for the Bastille dance with Kathleen Brown, 23-year-old school teacher from Roseville, Calif., who was visiting her uncle and aunt in the Canal Zone, she said.

Miss Brown was described as a casual acquaintance of Love.

Mrs. Watson, continuing her version of the slaying, said she waited hours outside the Union Club until she saw the couple leaving about 3:30 a. m.

She struck Miss Brown in the face and the Californian ran into the club and a few minutes later left with another escort.

Mrs. Watson and Love started an argument, she sitting in her car and he in his.

"I had a gun in the dashboard compartment of my car," she said. "Love insulted and humiliated me by telling me to return to my husband.

Saw Him With Another

"I fired. Blinded by the flash of the first shot, I do not remember what I did after that."

Advised shortly thereafter of his wife's plight, Watson hurried to the police station and set about securing the services of a lawyer for defense of Mrs. Watson.

Unable to see her, Watson told a reporter whom he thought might be able to get past the guards:

"Tell her that no matter what has happened in the past I am with her."

Because of complicated legal procedure here, involving investigation by a judge instead of police, it may be some months before a decision is reached on whether grounds exist for putting Mrs. Watson on trial.

Pink Marble Slabs For Columns Set At Art Gallery

Work watchers who have kept a close tab on construction at the National Gallery of Art were heartened yesterday to see massive slabs of pink marble set up ready to be carved into columns.

By October, officials estimated, all 29 columns will be ready to take their places at the two fronts of the structure. Twelve will go on the Mall side and eight will face Constitution avenue.

Each will be composed of eight drums of solid marble, with a carved cap and a base. With the dome, they will be the chief decorations of the magnificent building.

Woman Slays Husband 'Never Took Her Out'

Green Bay, Wis., July 14 (AP).—Police Inspector Henry J. Bero said Mrs. Matt Weidner tonight confessed she had clubbed to death her 54-year-old husband, found dead in his bed early today.

Inspector Bero said Mrs. Weidner maintained her mind was a "blank" from the time she went into the basement in her nightgown for a steel-banded club.

Bero said Mrs. Weidner gave no reason except that there had been a long series of grievances and her husband "never took her out."

Bar Keeps Free Hand in Civil Rights Cases

Lawyers Reject Move to Abolish Special Committee

San Francisco, July 14 (AP).—A resolution to prohibit the Bar Association from entering any civil liberties case, a move sponsored by Robert Carey, of Jersey City, N. J., was voted down at the American Bar Association's sixty-second annual convention here today.

There were scattered "ayes" when the vote was taken on his proposal to abolish the association's bill of rights committee.

Carey termed Harry Bridges, whose deportation hearing is under way here, "one of the worst menaces in America today."

"The bar will be asked to enter this case, and if we take a stand it would split the bar association wide open," Carey said.

Charles A. Breadsley, Oakland, Calif., new president, spoke against the resolution, says, "Many civil liberties problems face us, and we need the committee."

Sylvan Theater Program Listed

"International Night" is the title of the weekly festival to be presented in the Sylvan Theater, Washington Monument grounds, at 8 p. m. Tuesday, according to an announcement yesterday by the Summer Festival Committee.

The latter half, under direction of Marian Chace, will feature the Chace dancers in a Negro spiritual number, a Spanish dance and a Viennese waltz.

Chair tickets for the festival are on sale at the Franklin administration building, Willard and Washington hotels and the American Automobile Association ticket bureau.

Hospital Aid Work Increased

Miss Mattie M. Gibson, superintendent, yesterday reported that 3,357 boys and girls were given 22,367 days' care at Children's Hospital during the first half of 1939, a small increase over the corresponding period last year.

A more noticeable rise was in the number of dispensary visits, which totaled 29,607 between January and June, inclusive. In addition, there were 4,926 visits to the child welfare department, where prevention of disease is the objective.

The social service department made more than 3,000 home visits during the half-year period, Miss Gibson said.

Harlan Operators, Miners to Resume Parleys Today

Harlan, Ky., July 14 (AP).—Peace negotiations in Harlan County's soft coal field strife will be resumed tomorrow on neutral territory at Knoxville.

Joseph T. Cunningham, president of the Harlan County Coal Operators Association, shortly after receiving a telegraphed request from Secretary of Labor Perkins asking resumption of peace talks, said the meeting was arranged Wednesday, "long before Madam Perkins wired us." William Turnblazer, president of the Harlan district of the United Mine Workers (C. I. O.), confirmed announcement of the meeting.

Two Federal investigators, assigned to the area by Attorney General Murphy, were en route to Frankfort, State capital, to confer with Gov. Chandler before coming here.

New Deal Wins Lending Bill Test

the day a modified PWA bill calling for a $350,000,000 outlay, of which $50,000,000 would be spent for Federal projects. Starnes' new proposal would call for a 30 per cent local contribution against 70 per cent by the Federal Government on State and municipal projects.

Jesse Jones, new Federal loan administrator, indorsed the self-liquidating program before the Senate Banking Committee. He suggested that in addition to authorizing the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to spend $500,000,000 in buying up obsolete equipment and leasing new rolling stock to railroads that the bill be amended to permit the agency to aid the carriers in retiring outstanding securities to reduce their fixed charges.

The recently enacted revenue act authorized railroads in unsound financial condition to buy up debt obligations below par without paying a penalty tax on the difference.

No Loss to U. S.

Jones also said much obsolete equipment in the hands of railroads could be bought up for its "junk value" to stimulate a demand for new equipment under the President's program. The loss to the Government could be made up, he emphasized, through revenue from new equipment that could be leased to the carriers.

"The RFC has had a good deal of experience with self-liquidating loans and we believe in them," the former RFC chairman said. He assured the committee all loans made to railroads under the program would have the joint approval of the Interstate Commerce Commission and the RFC.

Develop Alaska to Strengthen Defense, Stefansson Urges

Explorer Warns Soviet Russia Is Ahead Of U. S. in Exploiting Wealth of Arctic; Suggests Special Attention to Meat Industry

In the person of Viljalmur Stefansson, the Arctic yesterday told this country to look to its northern possessions.

Here to confer with the Government on Alaskan problems—including its defense—the explorer said it is high time the United States matched the progress of other countries, particularly Russia, in the territory to which his discoveries added hundreds of square miles.

But Stefansson made little mention of his own exploits in an interview at the Carlton Hotel. Instead, he pointed out on a map a vast region of Soviet colonization and development of Arctic country, indicating the proximity of warlike Japan. Hastily, he placed his finger squarely on Alaska.

Vital to Defense

"It is very important we hasten the development of Alaska," he declared. "In case of attack on this country, it would be of vital importance as a base for counterattack." He added, "Secretary Seward knew that in 1867 when we bought Alaska—he said Alaska would dominate the Pacific—but apparently we've forgotten."

Asked what steps this country should take in fortifying Alaska, the explorer pointed out that there are plans for a large air base there and said he favored establishing strong Army and Navy units to take advantage of Alaska's natural strategic position.

"But just sending troops up there isn't the whole answer by any means," Stefansson said. "Alaska should be developed so as to support those troops independently of this country, both for reasons of economy and in case transportation lines were broken in wartime."

"Of course, the most important thing would be the development of Alaskan meat-producing industries, and we are fortunate that we have our reindeer. Cattle are too costly a proposition."

The reindeer—the herds number half a million, he said—"thrive in the frigid country and are not only a cheap source of meat and hides, but are efficient as draft animals."

"Everyone seems surprised," Stefansson said, "when you tell them how potentially rich the far North is—that there are vast mineral and lumber resources there, that wheat has been grown 200 miles north of the Arctic Circle."

But while the United States has continued to think of the Arctic as impracticable, this country's northern neighbors have not been unaware of its possibilities," Stefansson asserted.

"Soviet Russia has built many modern cities above the Arctic Circle to take full advantage of the lumber, minerals and shipping, especially in the last 15 years. One place, Agarka, a town of 200 trappers in 1929, now has a population of 15,000 and everything from electricity to a daily paper.

"The Russian colonization is far ahead of ours in almost every way. It's time we got busy," the explorer concluded.

Consolidated At Last

With the appointment of Lewis R. Barrett as co-ordinator of recreation, a partial consolidation of the District's play facilities has at last been achieved. The new set-up is still contingent upon approval by Congress of the long-delayed local appropriations bill, but the consolidation of recreational activities is not one of the points in controversy.

Mr. Barrett is the logical choice for this assignment. For years he has been trying to bring about a unified recreational program in the District. His efforts have been only partly successful. The National Capital Parks will continue to operate a large part of the Capital's play space outside the jurisdiction of the new Playgrounds Commission. Yet the consolidation of the playgrounds under the District government and the Board of Education is an achievement of real importance.

Because of his tact in trying to work out a difficult problem and his thorough training as a recreational director, Mr. Barrett already has the confidence of officials and employes in this field. His new assignment comes, moreover, at a moment when the community is vehemently demanding more safe play space for children in underprivileged districts.

He has a rare opportunity to work out an enlarged as well as unified recreational program that will give the community at least one tangible advantage of modernized local government.

Pernicious Politics

A happy settlement of all reasonable controversy over the Hatch bill "to prevent pernicious political activities" is promised by an amendment which Congressman Dempsey will offer when the bill reaches the floor of the House. The Dempsey amendment is a restatement of the chief objective sought by Senator Hatch. But it also removes all possible cause for objection to Section 9, where controversy has centered.

There has been a good deal of misunderstanding over this bill. The Post inadvertently contributed to that misunderstanding on Wednesday, when we editorially referred to Section 2 as the chief bone of contention. Actually it was Section 9 to which Senator Hatch referred when he said that the House Judiciary Committee had emasculated certain portions of the bill. The two sections are similar in wording and may easily be confused. Fortunately the proposed Dempsey amendment draws a clear distinction between them.

The purpose of Section 9 is to curtail political activity on the part of Government employes not under the civil service system. It would of course permit them privately to express their opinions on political subjects and to vote as they choose, but they would be forbidden to take any "active part in political management or in political campaigns." In writing this part of his bill Senator Hatch used the exact language of the rule now applying to Federal employes in the classified service.

No valid reason has been or can be advanced for permitting one group of Federal employes to indulge in any and all forms of political activity, while another group is forbidden to participate in partisan campaigns. On the other hand, there is a powerful argument for removal of all Government servants, except policy-making executives, from active party service. Their sole allegiance should be to the Government, regardless of what party may be in power.

In addition to curtailing "pernicious political activity," this part of the Hatch bill would be a great boost for the civil service system. For, if no Government employes could take an active part in political campaigns, spoilsmen would soon lose interest in keeping large numbers of them outside of the merit plan. Section 9 becomes, therefore, a vital salient in the fight for a better personnel system and more efficient Government service.

Undoubtedly this accounts for the interest of the National Civil Service Reform League in the measure. What the Hatch bill does, says the league in a statement supporting that measure, "is to extend to the entire Federal civil service the prohibitions against political activity, political coercion and solicitation of campaign funds, which under the civil service law long have been applied to persons in the classified service."

It is the outstanding importance of this measure which makes it desirable to have the language of Section 9 completely clarified. As passed by the Senate it would forbid "any person employed in any administrative or supervisory capacity by any agency of the Federal Government" to take part in political campaigns. That wording might apply to the President's official family. As advocated by The Post, the Dempsey amendment draws a specific distinction between policy-making officials and the rank and file of Government employes. The President, Vice President, the White House staff, heads of executive departments, and other policy-determining officials whose appointments must be confirmed by the Senate, would be exempt.

Mr. Dempsey's amendment thus becomes a vital part of the bill. In approving the measure, the House should realize that it is placed above criticism by this well-drafted ban upon electioneering from the vantage point of a Federal office.

National Humiliation

If the dictators are looking for a good opportunity to deride the workings of democracy they can find it ready-made in the Capital of the United States. And it is doubtful whether the pen of a Goebbels or a Gayda could exaggerate the shame and indignity which every thoughtful American must feel at Washington's recent experience.

The wrecking of local government which has been so narrowly averted is much more than a matter of local concern. It is a national disgrace when private bankers must be relied upon to get the National Capital out of hock. Yesterday, when the distracted District Commissioners hastened to approve such an arrangement "in principle," a new and all-time low in Washington's history was recorded. Not since the city was captured by the British has it been more thoroughly humiliated.

In the issue now glaringly revealed it makes no difference that the House, at the eleventh hour yesterday, agreed to a somewhat higher Federal payment for the current year. It will make no real difference in the issue, however important to thousands of individuals, if by heroic official effort the city proves able to meet its pay roll today. Indeed the moral was only clarified by the belated effort of House leaders, yesterday, to repair the damage wrought. For this change of attitude tacitly emphasized the congenital incompetence of Congress as a governing body for the District of Columbia.

That incompetence has been long and frequently illustrated. But this week it was hammered home in a way that Washington should never forget. Gross distortion of the elementary facts about the city they rule was indulged in by several Congressmen in the jibing, superficial "debate" on District affairs in the House on Wednesday. And this has happened so often that Washingtonians would not deserve to be called Americans if they continued to take it lying down.

Yet the situation is not really the fault of Congress. Many members of that body, in the Senate particularly, give days and weeks of thankless labor to studying and endeavoring to solve the District's problems. Even in the House, where ignorance of this municipality is dense, there are shining examples who frequently put the city's interests before their own. It is the set-up, not the individuals, which insures that Washington will be misgoverned, even to the truly appalling degree now demonstrated.

Men who come to Washington to handle national problems and to represent their constituencies cannot be expected to become experts on the local government of this very unusual municipality. Capacity in that field is the least of their concerns in seeking election and the most easily evaded of their responsibilities while here. It is idle to blame the individual Congressman when he talks nonsense about the city he is called upon to govern. Rather it is a matter for admiration if he has taken the time and energy to gain more than a superficial knowledge of local complexities.

Congressman Nichols, chairman of the House Conference Committee on the District revenue legislation, blurted out the truth on Wednesday. He told his colleagues that "there are only two things in this bill which can affect materially your constituents or my constituents back home." And these two things were really one—the amount of money which Washington costs taxpayers who do not live here.

That revealing remark goes far to clarify the issue. Mr. Nichols was justified, on the one hand, in telling the House that its only interest in Washington is to see that the cost of our local government is continuously screwed down. And Washington is justified, on the other hand, in saying that the city simply cannot be governed indefinitely by a set of men who, as a whole, have no interest in, no understanding of, and no real responsibility for its local problems.

The very essence of democracy is a clearly-defined responsibility to the governed on the part of the governors. For Washingtonians that fundamental of our national system is denied. It is in name only, not in fact, that the residents of the District are citizens of a democracy. Actually they live under a singularly inchoate and irresponsible dictatorship.

If the present crisis helps to make this clear, and to concentrate attention on constructive solution of the problem, it will not have been in vain. Idle recriminations between Washingtonians and Congress serve no purpose. Basically it is the system and the system only which is at fault.

Detailed Congressional control of this municipality could work, in rather bungling fashion, as long as Washington remained a small and sleepy town. It can never work effectively for the great metropolis now spreading from the banks of the Potomac.

"Peace And Neutrality"

As the two men upon whom rests the primary responsibility for conducting American foreign relations, President Roosevelt and Secretary Hull are naturally greatly disturbed by the possibility that Congress will adjourn without taking any constructive action on the neutrality problem.

Such inaction would be tantamount to throwing overboard the decisive influence for peace which the United States is in a position to exert and, in that way, encouraging those powers whose policies threaten to plunge Europe into war. Yet, should war break out, the present truncated neutrality act is certain to prove an extremely weak reed to lean upon.

It is, therefore, out of a solemn awareness of their responsibilities and out of a profound and well-reasoned conviction that only through a change in the present act can the peace of the United States be safeguarded, that the President and the Secretary of State issued their appeal to Congress yesterday.

Secretary Hull's statement, and the note of the President recommending it to Congress, bear the title "Peace and Neutrality." The significance of this wording must not be lost to sight. Any measure can be called a neutrality law. Such a measure may even be, accepting the distorted terminology of our times, a neutrality law. But there is and can be no assurance that the mere labeling of a measure as a neutrality act will really safeguard either our neutrality or our peace.

As Secretary Hull points out, the first essential in preventing the United States from being drawn into war "is to use whatever influence it can, compatible with the traditional policy of our country of non-involvement, so as to make less likely the outbreak of a major war.

The lifting of the mandatory arms embargo embodied in the present law, and other carefully reasoned recommendations urged by Mr. Hull, would contribute toward that great end. If this Congress chooses to ignore these earnest pleas of the Chief Executive and the Secretary of State it will risk a dreadful responsibility at the bar of history.

Unwritten Warning

The British government is not relying on alliances, guarantees, speeches and statements alone to convince Hitler of its determination to prevent further aggression.

This week, for instance, Parliament was asked to approve supplementary estimates for the war office totaling close to $400,000,000. These will bring the total which Great Britain plans to spend for rearmament during the current fiscal year to well over $3,000,000,000.

The effect of these current expenditures for war preparation, however, will not be fully apparent for some time. But the effects of previous efforts in the same direction are now both visible and impressive.

Last year, Great Britain was particularly weak and Germany especially strong in the air arm. Indeed, it was this circumstance which went a long way in explaining the Munich settlement. Since then, however, the British have made very striking progress in this vital category of defense. Proof is to be found in the superbly-executed flight of 125 fully loaded British bombing planes to Bordeaux and back. The fact that the German press hastened to disparage it suggests that the Nazi regime was by no means unimpressed.

It is still believed that Germany has a substantial edge over the other European powers both in the number of planes ready for operation, and in airplane production capacity. But she no longer enjoys the overwhelming superiority of a year ago. This fact alone makes the possibility of a successful "Blitzkrieg," or lightning war, less and less likely.

The German air force could still do terrible damage to the crowded British cities. But the "routine practice flight" of the British bombers to Bordeaux is effective warning that, if need be, two can play at this ghastly game.

If a man thinks he's Napoleon and nobody agrees he becomes an inmate of the asylum; if the masses agree with him, he becomes a dictator.

Home would be the best place in the world to spend a nice quiet and comfortable vacation if it weren't too inexpensive.

"Space is limited," declares Einstein. Shucks, that's no news; editors have been telling us that for years.

For Roosevelt

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In the contest which is now on between the democratic Democrats, and the reactionary parties, whether they call themselves conservative Democrats or rejuvenated Republicans, I take my stand with the people against all the 57 varieties of reform pedlars with their fantastic solicitations for a new era.

I take my stand with the people against empire and in favor of the perpetuity of the Republic. Ours is the great Republic, the beacon light of the world, the refuge of the oppressed of every clime, the home for the downtrodden of every land, and it is the imperative duty of those who are here and enjoying the inestimable blessings of our free institutions to see to it that the Government of Jefferson, of Jackson, and of Franklin D. Roosevelt does not perish from the earth.

President Roosevelt's sterling integrity, his keen discernment of what is just and right and his implacable hatred of corruption in all its forms combine to make him a staunch defender and an able advocate of the people's rights and interests. His strong, eloquent voice in every struggle of the people is heard like the tones of a trumpet beating full on the ear, eradicating doubt, inspiring confidence and animating the soul with the hope of ultimate victory.

His researches are not for dress parade or gaudy exhibition, but for practical public use and benefit; it is not the romance, but the stern reality which interests him. His mind is eminently practical and stored with facts and truths.

To him law is an exact science and when human law does not conform to the natural law of justice, he regards it as a species of legal violence. Those fundamental principles which have their abode in the brave and honest heart, the clear mental vision which looks through the mists of sophistry, the irresistible energy of mind which sweeps aside the artificial impediments that obstruct the path to the realization of industrial justice, the keen mental discernment that penetrates dark places where fraud and corruption might lurk, the unswerving devotion to public duty, fidelity to lofty ideals and the courage that braves all dangers, meets all opposition in the cause of good government, pure politics, civic righteousness and industrial justice—all these he has; and they combine to make him not only a great President, but a great lawmaker.

'Aliens' in China

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Bills presented at Washington and in State Legislatures would deny aliens all kinds of employment and relief, but would not relieve them from being taxed equally with citizens. Conspicuously, the enemies of aliens say nothing about the shoe on the other foot.

In China, the American aliens, with other alien groups, practically tell the Chinese government what privileges they are to have. They tell it with American and other alien gunboats in the nearest harbor. "Become naturalized? Become Chinese citizens? Do we look crazy? Not one of us! And keep out of our foreign (alien) settlement!"

Tax Plan

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The pother about the taxes in the District seems unnecessary when there is an easy solution ready to hand. Nearly all the dollars in the District are Government dollars. The few that flow from outside into the pockets of the hotels, taxi drivers, sight-seeing omnibuses, Capitol guides and post-card emporia are comparatively negligible. The Government people pay for Washington. It is their city.

Why would it not be the simplest thing in life to abolish all taxes (including real estate) and pay the cost of running the municipality by reducing the Government salaries sufficiently to provide a fund for the purpose? Those who would bear the burden would be the same people who do so now. The Government workers would get no less net wages. The merchants, landlords and others who live on the wages would bear their equitable share of the load. No one would be hurt.

The thing would be fair and even all round and cost absolutely nothing to collect.

I do not propose a horizontal cut, for it is an economic truism that the poorest people pay the most taxes. Therefore I suggest a greater relative reduction in the lowest salary brackets, on a scale diminishing toward the top. That removes any radical element from the proposal and leaves everyone with what he is used to.

If it be objected that the scheme exempts the few outside dollars that do flow in, this can be met by an excise levied on the taxi drivers, post card vendors, and hotel men, who will pass it on to their patrons. Thus we "make the foreigner pay the tax." To overcome the inequality that might arise if outsiders should take up permanent residence here, attracted by the exemption, and get police and fire protection for nothing, I propose to issue licenses to such persons for the privilege of living here, the fee to diminish as their scale of living increases, since the rich, being able to look after themselves, get less protection than the poor, and spend more money.

Thus you see everything is covered. The employes of the tax office could be pensioned and the space vacated by them would save the cost of erecting the new Municipal Building.

If there is any flaw in the plan, perhaps your readers will point it out.

NEW DEAL.

International Law

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is customary to assume that our Senators and Representatives are patriotic. Unfortunately, a reading of their speeches and a study of their votes indicates the contrary—a large majority give little or no consideration to the national interest.

They play politics; they are jealous of the President; they keep their ears to the ground and respond to the local pressure groups, including some that are alien. The United States has millions of foreign-born and more millions of foreign parentage. Many of these are open supporters of foreign governments.

The British have, indeed, been imperialistic, but since the war they have given independence to Ireland, Egypt, and Iraq; they have given constitutions to India and Burma; they have given up concessions in China, and in almost every respect have pursued peaceful and conciliatory policies. Recently the only criticism of British policy is that it has been shortsightedly conciliatory where it should have been strong.

This Congress has voted one and three-quarter billions for national defense because France and Britain no longer dominate Europe and Japan is conquering China. Germany and Italy make war and preparation for war the primary business of the state, and if they win in Europe we shall have to match them. The appropriation of nearly two billions for defense by the United States is only a small installment on what it will cost the United States if Germany and Italy win out.

In defense appropriations and in trade, the rise of the Fascist states is costing the United States billions per year and the cost will grow with each new conquest which we facilitate by our economic help. Are we too stupid or too cowardly to withdraw this help? Mussolini gave public thanks for our miscalled neutrality legislation.

Now that Hitler and Mussolini have come into the open as brutal and conscienceless conquerors they have educated the men of the country to demand that the United States safeguard its own interests. We must reverse the earlier error of siding with the dictators against the democracies. We must revert to established international law.

T. A. BRUCE BAREFOOT.

Strikes and Unions

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Isn't there some way a bill could be brought up to Congress that could in some way give justice to so-called labor and capital and by which all unions outside of business could be done away with?

The strikes and unions are undermining our American people—bringing disharmony, dissatisfaction, and breeding contempt and hatred for the other. We need labor and we need capital to back it, and God bless them both. Some wages are really too small, but the unions are demanding unreasonable ones, too.

Let us hope in the future, not so far distant, that unions can be abolished for the peace of our American people—and that private business concerns can have their own council room where both the employes and employer can and will come to a peaceful agreement, where outside influence cannot intrude.

AN AMERICAN.
Washington, July 13.

Not Indispensable

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Voltaire wrote, "I heartily disapprove of what you say, but will defend to your death the right to say it."

As a result of the bitter bigotry, intolerance and the will to power which has so characterized the Roosevelt Administration, the Nation has become divided into hostile camps, and the good will which should exist in a democracy is conspicuous for its absence.

Certainly the idea, so prevalent among New Dealers, that Roosevelt is right and those that disagree with him "wrong" is hardly calculated to promote political peace. Moreover, the theory that the President, like the King, can do no wrong and is the only man fit to rule 130,000,000 people is an insult to Jeffersonian democracy.

After all, Mr. Roosevelt, like his predecessors, will soon pass completely out of the political picture, and with him many hazy objectives. In the meanwhile, let us be reconciled with the fact that no individual is indispensable to our great democracy; nor is any man as big as his country. Those that think otherwise should seek an abode elsewhere. F. K. GOLDSBOROUGH.

The Post Impressionist

Foreign

"DON'T EVER, not ever," said Freyling, "mention foreign students to me again. If the dean orders it, I'll recruit Zulu natives or South American headhunters and plant them in the dormitories, but I'll teach in a girls' school before I'll ever have any part of bringing young gentlemen from European universities to circulate among our undergraduates and give them the benefit of their broadened Continental backgrounds.

"There are, I am sure, some desirable European students. I am equally sure that there is some desirable European culture, especially since I'm supposed to be inculcating some of it in my own classes. But I'll be damned if I can find where and who the students are who could bring some of that culture to these rock-bound coasts.

"The program started the year before last. After voluminous correspondence abroad, I thought I had been able to select four very promising students, an Englishman, Frenchman, German and Italian. They arrived on campus, were found rooms, suitably dined by the faculty and subtly advised it was their job to absorb a bit of America, as well as spread a bit of Europe over here.

"In the year he was here, I recall seeing the Englishman twice, both times at my instigation. Three students living in the same dormitory entry reported that they noticed him once or twice in the shower room. The only other evidence he was alive came from spasmodic messages sent up from the depths of the biology laboratory. I was told that his researches into the inherited characteristics of the fruit fly were little short of phenomenal. But they might just as well have been done at Cambridge.

"While the Englishman was merely a waste of money, he was not malign, which is more than can be said of the German. That young man got off to a fine start by telling his immediate neighbors that the cultural standards of American college students were utterly depraved and that only in Germany were academic and civilized values honored. Apparently he forgot to note that among the three men he talked to one was a lad turning out as mature a critique of Bergson as I've ever seen, another who single-handed was promoting an art gallery in the college, and a third who was putting himself through school doing book reviews for some of the more literate periodicals.

"We were spared the highly cultured Teuton, however, along about midyear, when a white-faced delegation from the dormitory paid me a visit and told me a story which had shocked them into breaching their code against squealing and tale-bearing. Naively shocked, the German might loftily have decided.

"The Italian contributed nothing in his year here save a series of contes drolles so bad they made even the Dekes despise him, and the Dekes have strong stomachs.

"The Frenchman was the prize, however. He immediately teamed up with the most unattractive and solitary greaseball in the college and soon came to me, asking if he could move out of the dormitory and did I know where there was an abandoned mill or church tower he could rent.

"I saw him once more in the spring, prowling gloomily along the commons in front of the little white church—a scene so utterly New England that it sent you scurrying for a copy of Emily Dickenson or Cotton Mather. But not Claude, the Frenchman. He was wearing a heavy black coat into which he had sunk his chin. He wore gaiters and gloves and a black Balkan conspirator fedora, pulled down around his ears.

"'My God, Claude,' I said to him. 'You look as if you had just stepped off the Boul' Mich.'

"'I am trying to imagine I am back in Paris,' he said, and scowled at me with a hatred which only nostalgia in its acutest form could muster up.

"I decided to try again last year, feeling that nothing could be as bad as the year before. I was wrong. The new Italian made a practice of listening to the names of any out-of-town friends which his classmates mentioned and then presented himself at their doors as the bosom companion of the students, but badly in need of a $50 loan or a week's board, lodging and entertainment. The last I heard of him he was giving short-wave broadcasts to South America from Rome as the Fascist Party's official spokesman.

"Last year's German borrowed a car, strictly against all rules, and smashed it up, breaking the arm, leg and three ribs of a girl from St. Helen's riding with him. She lived, but lost a year of schooling as a result. The last I heard of the German he had landed himself a berth in the Nazi Legation at Tokyo. When he was recommended for a scholarship here, the German forgot to mention he was an S. S. man.

"There was reason to believe that the new Englishman would have been almost human had he ever been sober, which he was not. A psychiatrist at Bloomingdale's, however, whither we sent him after he had terrorized the college infirmary staff, disagreed.

"The Frenchman, with true Gallic frugality, decided it cost too much to eat in the commons with the other students and cooked all his meals himself over a gas jet in his room. He saw no one, and once, when a group of undergraduates felt their obligation of hospitality demanded that they pay him a visit and see what they could do to make friends, he drove them out of his room behind a barrage of books and curses. Scholastically, he took advantage of what an American faculty had to offer by taking courses in nineteenth-century French drama and eighteenth-century French lyric poetry.

"This year Old Man Pearson, the alumnus who put up the scholarship funds for the foreign students, decided to turn over the interest to buy new equipment for the R. O. T. C. regiment."

Fair Enough

The Lawyers' Guild

THE NATIONAL Lawyers' Guild, on which Harold Ickes conferred his favor about the time that it was shaken by a revolt against Communism in its key positions, has had an experience strikingly similar to that of the American Youth Congress, which enjoys the political patronage of Mrs. Roosevelt.

Last February Judge Ferdinand Pecora, of New York, one of the founders of the club, ended his term as president with a speech that damned Fascism, Nazism and Communism with impartial hatred. A revolt began against Communist penetration and Pecora confronted several of the most pernicious Communists and accused them of attempting to use the guild as an element of the Communist United Front. A motion was made to ratify Pecora's speech as the sentiment of the Guild, and this was defeated by the executive committee, 18 to 9.

Pecora then threatened to blow the conspiracy open to the public, and on recommendation the vote for adoption was unanimous.

Communists, Watched, Are Less Aggressive

IN THE YOUTH Congress, which Mrs. Roosevelt attended not merely as a journalist, but as the wife of the President and a representative of the New Deal, a motion to condemn the three anti-American "isms" was defeated by the Communist influence. But this evasion was so flagrant that the Communists decided to yield a little and permit the adoption of a noncommittal resolution against dictatorship, whether Fascist, Nazist or Communist. They saw attention aroused, and, like their comrades in the Lawyers' Guild, saved what they could of an embarrassing situation, intending to recoup their loss by continued activity under cover of an innocent front.

Pecora, Morris Ernst and the late Frank P. Walsh threatened to resign from the Lawyers' Guild, but Judge John Gutknecht, of Chicago, the new president, persuaded them to wait and see, promising that he would attempt to clip the Communists' powers. That is the present status of the revolt. The Communists, knowing that they are being watched like thieves, have been less aggressive, but it is certain that as soon as the vigilance of the Americans relaxes they will resume their work.

THE COMMUNISTS are most numerous in the New York Guild, but there are many in the Washington chapter. And of the known but non-professing Communists a number are employed in the Government in the guise of liberal, progressive or Socialist lawyers. To say that the Communists are known is not to say that they can be named publicly. The party has accommodations for men who prefer to disguise themselves under other political labels. And one who has registered as a Democrat might make expensive trouble for anyone who accused him of his true political faith. It is not libelous to call a Communist a Republican, but it might be libelous to call a Communist a Communist.

Judge Gutknecht has made no positive gains against the conspirators. Rather, the gains have been negative through the discreet decision of the Communists to lie low a while. But there is no serious hope that they can be suppressed, or that the organization, originally intended as a liberal but strictly American offset to the conservative American Bar Association, can be saved from ultimate total discredit as a Communistic group.

Anti-Communists Lack A Coalition

THE REASON is that the Communists are a disciplined, united minority who go to all meetings in a body and never miss and, in routine meetings, usually find themselves with a majority. The anti-Communists stay away in large numbers. With them the guild is a secondary interest, but to the Communists it is a party weapon. The key Communists, with one exception, still retain their offices and, as the anti-Communists, lacking unity and discipline, neglect their membership duties, the manipulation will resume. In New York a group of 60 or 70 Communists has outpowered about 900 non-Communists by concerted action and constant attendance. Certain other organizations of laboring and professional people have had similar experiences.

J. B. Matthews, the backslid fellow traveler, wrote that the Communists captured the Youth Congress in its infancy and showed how it was done. And Judge Pecora, a New Deal Democrat and one of the founders of the Lawyers' Guild, admits that, through carelessness and inattention, the American majority in the Guild permitted the Communists to march right in and seize power far out of proportion to their numbers.

House Unit Favors New Shipbuilding Ways at Norfolk

The House Naval Committee went on record yesterday in favor of immediate construction of a new set of shipbuilding ways at the Norfolk, Va., Navy Yard as a means of stimulating private competition for Navy contracts.

It adopted a resolution by Representative Darden (Democrat), of Virginia, asserting that lack of facilities at Navy yards for ship construction put the Navy at a disadvantage and expressing the committee's sentiment that the Navy should proceed at once with construction of an additional set of ways, estimated to cost $1,750,000.

Darden explained this would put the Norfolk yard on a par with those at Philadelphia and New York and tend to force private builders to compete for Navy construction.

Text Of Roosevelt-Hull Neutrality Statement

Lift Arms Embargo To Keep The Peace, Congress Is Urged

The text of President Roosevelt's message and Secretary Hull's statement on neutrality follow:

To the Congress of the United States: I am advised that by a vote of 12 to 11 the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations has referred action on peace and neutrality legislation until the next session of the Congress.

I am appending hereto a statement from the Secretary of State which has my full approval, and which I trust will receive your earnest attention.

It has been abundantly clear to me for some time that for the cause of peace and in the interest of American neutrality and security, it is highly advisable that the Congress at this session should take certain much needed action. In the light of present world conditions, I see no reason to change that opinion.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.
The White House,
July 14, 1939.

Statement On Peace, Neutrality By The Secretary Of State

The cornerstone of the foreign policy of the United States is the preservation of the peace and security of our Nation, the strengthening of international law, and the revitalization of international good faith. The foreign policy of this Government may be misinterpreted or it may be misunderstood, but it cannot be destroyed. Peace is so precious and war so devastating that the people of the United States and their Government must not fail to make their just and legitimate contribution to the preservation of peace.

The Congress has pending before it at the present time certain proposals providing for the amendment of the existing so-called neutrality legislation. Some of these proposed changes I regard as necessary to promote the peace and security of the United States.

There is an astonishing amount of confusion and misunderstanding as regards the legislation under consideration, and particularly with regard to the operation of the existing arms embargo.

I shall try to bring out as clearly as I can the important points of disagreement between those who support the principles contained in the six-point peace and neutrality program recommended by the Executive branch of the Government and those who oppose these recommendations.

Agree on Points

In substance and in principle both sides of the discussion agree on the following points:

1. Both sides agree that the first concern of the United States must be its own peace and security.

2. Both sides agree that it should be the policy of this Government to avoid being drawn into wars between other nations.

3. Both sides agree that this Nation should at all times avoid entangling alliances or involvements with other nations.

4. Both sides agree that in the event of foreign wars this Nation should maintain a status of strict neutrality, and that around the structure of neutrality we should so shape our policies as to keep this country from being drawn into war.

On the other hand, the following is the chief essential point of disagreement between those who favor the adoption of the recommendations formulated by the Executive branch of the Government and those who are opposing these recommendations:

Called Hazardous

The proponents, including the executive branch of the Government, at the time when the arms embargo was originally adopted called attention to the fact that its enactment constituted a hazardous departure from the principle of international law which recognizes the right of neutrals to trade with belligerents and of belligerents to trade with neutrals. They believe that neutrality means impartiality, and in their view an arms embargo is directly opposed to the idea of neutrality. It is not humanly possible, by enacting an arms embargo, or by refraining from such enactment, to hold the scales exactly even between two belligerents. In either case and due to shifting circumstances one belligerent may find itself in a position of relative advantage or disadvantage. The important difference between the two cases is that when such a condition arises in the absence of an arms embargo on our part, no responsibility attaches to this country, whereas in the presence of an embargo, the responsibility of this country for the creation of the condition is inevitably direct and clear.

There is no theory or practice to be found in international law pertaining to neutrality to the effect that the advantages that any particular belligerent might procure through its geographic location, its superiority on land or sea, or through other circumstances, should be offset by the establishment by neutral nations of embargoes.

The opposition to the present substitute proposal joins issue on this point and stands for existing rigid embargo as a permanent part of our neutrality policy. And yet by insisting on an arms embargo in time of war they are, to that extent, for the reasons I have stated, urging not neutrality, but what might well result in actual unneutrality, the serious consequences of which no one can predict.

Termed Illogical

Those who urge the retention of the present embargo continue to advance the view that it will keep this country out of war—thereby misleading the American people to rely upon a false and illogical delusion as a means of keeping out of war.

I say it is illogical because while the trade in "arms, ammunition and implements of war" is at present banned, the trade in equally essential war materials, as well as all the essential materials out of which the finished articles are made, can continue. For example, in time of war, we can sell cotton for the manufacture of explosives, but not the explosives; we can sell the steel and copper for cannon and for shells but not the cannon nor the shells; we can continue to sell to belligerents the high-powered fuel necessary for the operation of airplanes, but we are not able to sell the airplanes.

I say it is a false delusion because a continuation of the trade in arms is a clearly recognized and traditional right of the nationals of a neutral country in time of war, subject only to effective blockade and to the right of belligerents to treat any such commodities as contraband. The assertion frequently made that this country has ever engaged or may become engaged in serious controversy solely over the fact that its nationals have sold arms to belligerents is misleading and unsupportable. All available evidence is directly to the contrary. Every informed person knows that arms, as absolute contraband, are subject to seizure by a belligerent and that neither the neutral shipper nor his government has the slightest ground for complaint. There is, therefore, no reason to suppose that the sale of arms may lead to serious controversy between a neutral and a belligerent. Furthermore, under the proposals that have been made American nationals would be divested of all right, title and interest in these and other commodities before they leave our shores and American citizens and ships would be kept out of danger zones. As regards possible complications which might arise as a result of the extension of credits to belligerents or of extraordinary profits accruing to any group of producers in this country, it is wholly within the power of Congress at all times to safeguard the national interest in this respect.

Stresses Dangers

Controversies which would involve the United States are far more likely to arise from the entrance of American ships or American citizens in the danger zones or through the sinking on the high seas of American vessels carrying commodities other than those covered by the arms embargo. In the recommendations formulated by the Executive as a substitute for the present legislation it was especially urged that provisions be adopted which would exclude American nationals and American ships from zones where real danger to their safety might exist and which would divest goods of American ownership, thereby minimizing to the fullest extent the danger of American involvement.

Those of us who support the recommendations formulated for the elimination of the embargo are convinced that the arms embargo plays into the hands of those nations which have taken the lead in building up their fighting power. It works directly against the interests of the peace-loving nations, especially those which do not possess their own munitions plants. It means that if any country is disposed towards conquest, and devotes its energy and resources to establish itself as a superior fighting power, that country may be more tempted to try the fortunes of war if it knows that its less well prepared opponents would be shut off from those supplies which, under every rule of international law, they should be able to buy in all neutral countries, including the United States. It means also that some of those countries which have only limited facilities for the production of arms, ammunition and implements of war are put in a position of increased dependence. During peace-time they would feel the compulsion of shaping their political as well as their economic policy to suit the military strength of others; and during war-time their powers of defense would be limited.

Encourages Trouble

For these reasons those who are supporting the recommendations for the amendment of existing legislation recognize definitely that the present embargo encourages a general state of war both in Europe and Asia. Since the present embargo has this effect its results are directly prejudicial to the highest interests and to the peace and to the security of the United States.

In the present grave conditions of international anarchy and of danger to peace, in more than one part of the world, I profoundly believe that the first great step toward safeguarding this Nation from being drawn into war is to use whatever influence it can, compatible with the traditional policy of our country of noninvolvement, so as to make less likely the outbreak of a major war. This is a duty placed upon our Government which some may fail to perceive or choose to reject. But it must be clear to very one of us that the outbreak of a general war increases the dangers confronting the United States. This fact cannot be ignored.

I would emphasize that the course proposed through the substitute legislation recommended by the Executive is consistent with the rules of international law and with the policy of our own country over a period of 150 years. The basis for the recommendations made is the firm intention of keeping this country from being drawn into war. If there existed any desire to assist or to injure particular foreign countries this Government would not have been endeavoring persistently, within the limitations of our traditional policy, over a period of many years to do its utmost to avoid the outbreak of a general war. I earnestly hope that the Congress will lend the fullest measure of its co-operation in the endeavor to avoid war in the first place and to place this country in a position of the greatest security possible, should war break out. In the tragic event that peace efforts fail and that a major war occurs, there will be general agreement within the United States that every effort must be exerted to keep this country from being drawn therein.

Arms Sales Reviewed

I must also refer to the impression sedulously created to the effect that the sale of arms, munitions and implements of war by this country is immoral and that on this ground it should be suppressed in time of war.

As a matter of fact almost all sales of arms and ammunition made in recent years by our nationals have been made to governments whose policies have been dedicated to the maintenance of peace, but who have felt the necessity of creating or of augmenting their means of national self-defense, thereby protecting otherwise helpless men, women and children in the event that other powers resort to war. In the face of the present universal danger all countries, including our own, feel the necessity of increasing armament, and small countries in particular are dependent upon countries like the United States which have the capacity to produce armaments. Our refusal to make it possible for them to obtain such means of necessary self-defense in a time of grave emergency would contribute solely toward making more helpless the law-abiding and peace-devoted peoples of the world. If such action is moral, and if, on the contrary, sales of the means of self-defense for the protection of peaceful and law-abiding peoples are immoral, then a new definition of morality and immorality must be written. This task might be left to the proponents of the arms embargo.

I must also refer to another impression created by propaganda to the effect that the abandonment of the arms embargo would increase power of action on the part of the executive branch of the Government and conversely that the maintenance of the embargo would serve as an additional check on the powers of the Executive. It is difficult to see how either of these propositions could possibly hold true. An impartial granting of access to American markets to all countries without distinction gives the Executive no additional power to choose among them and to commit this country to any line of policy or action which may lead it either into a dangerous controversy or into war with any foreign power.

Recommendations Listed

The legislative proposals which were recommended to the Congress through the communications which I transmitted to Senator Pittman and to Congressman Bloom on May 27 providing for the safeguarding of our Nation to the fullest possible extent from incurring the risks of involvement in war contemplate the elimination of the existing arms embargo and are as follows:

1. To prohibit American ships from entering combat areas;

2. To restrict travel by American citizens in combat areas;

3. To require that goods exported from the United States to belligerent countries shall be preceded by the transfer of title to the foreign purchasers;

4. To continue the existing legislation respecting loans and credits to belligerent nations;

5. To regulate the solicitation and collection in this country of funds for belligerents; and

6. To continue the National Munitions Control Board and the licensing system with respect to the importation and exportation of arms, ammunition, and implements of war.

Substitute Offered

This six-point program was the best that could be devised after much painstaking thought and study, and after many conferences with members of the Congress, of how best to keep this country out of a conflict should it arise. It rests primarily on the established rules of international law, plus the curtailment of certain rights of our nationals, the exercise of which is permitted under international law but which might lead to controversies with belligerents and eventual involvement in foreign wars.

There has thus been offered as a substitute for the present act a far broader and more effective set of provisions, which in no conceivable sense could breed trouble, but which to a far greater extent than the present act would both aid in making less likely a general war, and, while keeping strictly within the limits of neutrality, would reduce as far as possible the risk of this Nation being drawn into war if war comes.

In connection with our foreign affairs, I think all must agree that, unless a spirit of collaboration and co-operation characterizes the relations between the executive and legislative departments of the Government, the peace and other vital interests of this country will inevitably be jeopardized.

Criticism Held Helpful

Having spent the best years of my life as a member of the two Houses of Congress, I have the warmest feeling of friendliness toward the membership of, and the greatest respect for, the legislative department, and, in that spirit, I earnestly hope for the closest possible co-operation in matters affecting our country's best interests and its security in the present grave international situation.

At this time when critical conditions obtain throughout the greater part of the world I am sure that we are all equally persuaded that while the fullest measure of constructive criticism is helpful and desirable, and is, of course, most welcome, partisanship should play no part in the determination of the foreign policy of this country.

In the present situation of danger a peaceful nation like ours cannot complacently close its eyes and ears in formulating a peace and neutrality policy, as though abnormal and critical conditions did not exist. The entire question of peace and neutrality at this serious juncture in its possible effects upon the safety and the interest of the United States during coming months is of the utmost importance. This question should, in my judgment, receive full and careful consideration and be acted upon by this Government without unnecessary or undue delay.

Isolationist View On Ban Scored As 'Illogical Delusion'

Provocation And Reaction

By Mark Sullivan

The President's Temper

EVENING NEWSPAPERS of one day this week, and morning papers following, carried two expressions of strong exasperation from President Roosevelt.

One was about a report, carried by the United Press, that Mr. Roosevelt and his Secretary of State, Mr. Cordell Hull, "disagreed." The disagreement, which the report asserted, was over what action Mr. Roosevelt should take with respect to the decision of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee not to take action on neutrality at this time.

This alleged disagreement, Mr. Roosevelt denied. He denied it in person, over his own name, in strong words, at considerable length. He said the story was "wholly false." Mr. Roosevelt's indignation is understandable. To say, at a time like the present, that the President of the United States and his Secretary of State "disagree" is a serious thing.

Mr. Roosevelt's indignation may arise in part from a special circumstance. He may realize how necessary it is for him to give to the people of the United States a picture of complete harmony with Secretary Hull.

MR. ROOSEVELT and Mr. Hull have worked out a neutrality policy. This policy they are asking Congress to adopt. Much of Congress likes the policy. Much of the country likes it.

The policy would give a certain amount of power and discretion to the President. It would enable the President to carry out a course to which he has long committed himself with respect to possible war in Europe.

But many of the very persons who believe in this policy, and who think that the Presidency of the United States, as an office, ought to have at all times some discretion in foreign relations—many of these same persons are uncomfortable about the use which the President now in office might make of this policy and this discretion. Such persons make a distinction between the policy as a policy, and the policy as Mr. Roosevelt might act under it. They think that Mr. Roosevelt is by temperament rather impetuous and headlong.

To such persons, agreement between Mr. Roosevelt and his Secretary of State is highly important. Secretary Hull's reputation is one of patience, surefooted calm. Mr. Roosevelt receives, for his neutrality policy, much support which he might not receive if the policy was not known to be supported by Mr. Hull.

IN THIS CIRCUMSTANCE, Mr. Roosevelt may have done himself a disservice by the extreme vigor of his denunciation of the report of disagreement between him and his Secretary. The manner of Mr. Roosevelt's denunciation suggests that he is a person who acts quickly and strongly upon provocation. And his action is likely to cause some to feel that in foreign relations he might be tempted to act in the same spirit in which he has just now acted.

On the same day as his expression of exasperation about a press report, Mr. Roosevelt gave out, or inspired, another, about another subject. One of his secretaries told the press, for publication, that the President was exasperated over delay by Congress in passing the regular District of Columbia appropriation bill.

The exasperation was explainable. The bill ought to have been passed July 1. Because it was not, the employes of the District of Columbia faced a pay day without authorization for their pay, and the whole conduct of the municipal business of the City of Washington was inconvenienced, or worse.

As respects Mr. Roosevelt, the effect of two public expressions of exasperation within a few hours may have increased the feeling that he is exceptionally subject to irritation, and to quick and drastic reaction to irritation. Yet it should not be forgotten that the primary blame in this District of Columbia incident is upon Congress.

THROUGHOUT THE world, parliamentary government is in danger. In country after country the legislative branch of government has been extinguished, or reduced to practical nullity. The reason given in nearly all cases is that Parliaments, Congresses, are inefficient; that they are slow, that they cannot act with the speed demanded by modern conditions. From this arises the assertion that one-man government is more efficient, that dictatorship is made necessary.

That this attitude, already fatal to free and representative government in a large part of the world, may infect the United States, is this country's greatest danger. Already there are persons here who voice the same patter that has led to overthrow of free government elsewhere.

For resisting this danger, the largest responsibility is on Congress. It should continuously give to the country and to the world proof of its ability to function. What is involved in the present matter of the District of Columbia is a mere routine affair. Congress has been in session since January 3. At all times it has known that the fiscal year ends June 30. That it should fail to pass one of the necessary appropriation bills before that date would be difficult to justify.

The dilatoriness of Congress on this point not only gives ammunition to those who claim that parliamentary government is inefficient. It weakens the public esteem for Congress, and, thereby decreases the power of Congress to live up to one of its most useful functions, which is sometimes to refuse demands for legislation made by the President. For Congress to refuse assent to a measure asked by the President is one thing, and often a well-justified thing. To fail to pass an ordinary routine measure on time is a different thing.

A Cycle Of Europe

France Celebrates An Anniversary

FRANCE'S celebration of Bastille Day was carried out with even more than the customary fervor this year. In the first place, this week marked the 150th anniversary of the fall of the Paris dungeon which symbolized to Frenchmen of the late eighteenth century all that was despotic and arbitrary in the old regime. But the remembrance of things past was this time overshadowed by the fear of the future.

It is not only France upon whom the shadow of threatening disaster falls. It is also that system of government, that way of life, that attitude of mind and heart which were given tremendous impetus by the revolution ushered in with the fall of the Bastille.

THE FRENCH Revolution was the seminal event of modern times. Together with the American Revolution which preceded it by only a few years it set the stage for the political and social developments of the subsequent century and a half.

The seeds planted by that great upheaval in the France of 1789-1794 took root throughout the continent. They did not sprout everywhere with equal force. In some places they achieved in the course of the decades a fairly vigorous growth. Elsewhere the ensuing plant proved feeble, never attained full maturity and was easily cut down. But there is not a country in Europe or for that matter in any other continent which in some fashion or other has not been influenced by what took place in France a century and a half ago.

TWO GREAT, if somewhat contradictory currents stem from the French Revolution. The first is democracy. The second is nationalism. For a long time these two currents flowed together. The right of the individual to freedom from a foreign yoke seemed the essential corollary to the right to freedom from domestic despots. Such men as Joseph Mazzini saw no essential antagonism between democracy and nationalism. Their ideal was a world in which free men inhabited free nations. Yet in our own times we have had more than one example of the nation assuming all the power and prerogatives that were exercised by the despots of old and ruthlessly trampling out the rights of individuals. Indeed, the despots of today are both more powerful and more ruthless than their predecessors.

THE IDEALS of the French Revolution were ... despite certain evil manifestations to which they gave rise, humanitarian ideals: They were based on the belief that man is an essentially good and essentially reasonable being. Their purpose, therefore, was to liberate the individual. The totalitarian powers of today act on the opposite assumption—that men are irrational, that they can be swung to any course by the mesmeric power of incessant propaganda that need have no basis in fact and that the rights of the regime so transcend the rights of the individual that terror is legitimately an instrument of government.

From that point of view, the spread of totalitarianism can thus be regarded in the nature of a counter-revolution. In other words, what we are witnessing today is in essence a throw-back to the pre-1789 period.

YET THE MENTAL habits of a century are not easily set aside. While Hitler and Mussolini trample on the bloated corpse of liberty, in the Duce's striking and revealing phrase, they apply certain aspects of the very democratic tradition whose ideology they scorn. If they have no use either for liberty or fraternity, they do not hesitate to pay lip service to the principle of equality, the third of the great trinity of 1789. In our modern dictatorships, men are equal in that none except the dictator enjoys any rights except the right to obey without question, believe without criticism and fight when told to.

Moreover, it must be recognized that they are also the heirs of the French Revolution, although in a curiously distorted way as the image of a man seen in a twisted mirror. It was the France of the revolution which first resorted to propaganda beyond the borders of the nation. The dictators have improved on their teacher. It was the France of the revolution which was responsible for the creation of the citizen army to replace the old mercenary forces which fought the wars of the earlier centuries. Napoleon, too, was the heir of the revolution. Mussolini and Hitler are his direct descendants.

IN THE COURSE of the decades since 1776 and 1789, and particularly during the earlier years of the present century, democracy came to be taken for granted. It was assumed, and the history of the ninteenth century gave grounds for this assumption, that democracy was the inevitable form of government. We cannot be so complacent now. Freedom is a state that withers with neglect. It needs constant and prayerful care and those who believe in it must forever rededicate themselves to its service.

Father And Son Dialogues

"Popper, what is a self-liquidating loan?"

"Sonnie, go out and play. The boy next door is whistling for you."

"Daddy, I've been reading about the plan to lend $4,000,000,000 to industry for self-liquidating projects and I don't understand it."

"It's too deep to try to understand fully, my boy. Go ride your bicycle."

"But, popper, I wanna know about it."

"Well, I guess what it all means is that the Government still holds the notion that anybody pays back all money he borrows.

"But what is a self-liquidating loan, popper?"

"Let's see. Assume I am a manufacturer of doorknobs and the doorknob business is in a bad way all over America. All the doorknob factories are closed and no doorknob worker can get a job."

"But why, popper, is the doorknob business in such a bad way?"

"Nobody is buying doorknobs. They have enough. Well, suppose I run a big doorknob factory. I haven't any money to spend for advertising and I can't afford to put any money into new type doorknobs and a big selling campaign."

"So what, popper?"

"So I wake up some morning and read that the Government has a plan to revive my business. It will lend me a million dollars, maybe, to open full blast and turn out more doorknobs."

"Will that be a self-liquidating project, popper?"

"The Government says so. It says the people have always used doorknobs, that the old doorknobs are worn out and that if I go at it right I can turn out a bumper crop of doorknobs, create a big demand, sell 'em all and pay back the loan."

"What next, popper."

"I take the loan, I put on a big selling campaign and I spend all the money I borrowed but nobody buys the doorknobs."

"What do you do then, popper?"

"You mean what does the Government do then? Well, it issues an appeal to the people to put an extra set of doorknobs on every door. Then it lends me another million to sell the country the idea that two sets of doorknobs on every door are necessary. I get up an advertising campaign with the slogan, 'Wise Americans Do Not Depend on One Set of Doorknobs!'"

"Does it work, popper?"

"No."

"Is that loan self-liquidating?"

"No, so I get another self-liquidating loan to liquidate all the previous loans."

"It it difficult, daddy?"

"It's compulsory. Then with the new loan Congress passes a law making it compulsory for every house in America to have three sets of doorknobs on every door."

"Does that clear up everything?"

"I'm afraid not. But I am not downhearted. I still have an ace in the hole so all the loans can be liquidated."

"What is it, popper?"

"I get together with all the doorknob makers and get Congress to pass a law requiring doorknobs on windows!"

The Tardy Must Wait for Seats At Watergate

Late comers at the Watergate sunset concerts will not be seated until numbers are finished and intermission is called, the National Symphony Orchestra Association announced last night. A statement deploring confusion and distraction at Wednesday night's opening concert read in part:

"There has been considerable criticism expressed on the part of those who were distracted by the seating of late arrivals during the first portion of Wednesday night's Sunset Symphony.

"The summer concert committee feels the criticism was justified, and regrets the distractions, although they were unadvoidable under the circumstances. Steps have been taken to prevent their recurrence at future concerts by setting the starting hour at 8 p. m. sharp and by instructing ushers to seat no one after the concert's opening between numbers."

Many Here Dare Crises For Jaunts to Europe

Mrs. Bacon and Her Two Daughters and Miss Johnson, Writer, to Visit Danzig; Members of Congress to See Oslo

By Dudley Harmon

BARON (KEPI) SCHELL, former secretary of the Hungarian Legation here, who was recently transferred to Budapest, has written back that he misses all his Washington friends, but that he does not miss the weekly international crises which he used to read about in American newspapers. Evidently one sees little if anything about them in Hungarian journals. Crises or no, however, members of Capital society are continuing to make plans to travel abroad this summer and many of them are even heading right for the danger spots.

Danzig is the destination of Mrs. Robert Low Bacon and her two attractive daughters, the Misses Martha and Virginia Bacon. Mrs. Bacon believes in visiting places where exciting things are happening and will sail July 24 on the Gripsholm. After a stay in the Free City, she and her daughters will tour Sweden and Norway. They have set no definite date for their return, and will not come back to their attractive home here until fed up with traveling about.

Another popular Capital resident who will visit Danzig is Miss Mary V. Johnson, one of the able younger newswriters of Washington. She will sail in August for a stay of six weeks abroad.

Plans Trip to Congress in Norway

Not all Senators and Representatives will dash back home for a bit of fence mending, however, when Congress adjourns. Quite a few have their eyes fixed hopefully on European vacations. Representative Hamilton Fish has received fifty applications from colleagues eager to attend the annual Interparliamentary Congress, to be held this year at Oslo, Norway. The Congress begins August 15 and lasts for a week. As president of the American section of the Interparliamentary Association, Representative Fish has the privilege of picking delegates to the session from among the membership of the House and Senate. He hopes to sail either July 22 or July 26, depending on when he can get away.

Much depends on When Congress adjourns. Senator Alben Barkley, majority leader, has been invited to be a delegate to the conference, but has to wait until he knows more about the situation on the Hill. At the conference a resolution will be presented suggesting that the 1940 meeting be held in Washington. As this resolution already has been approved by the council of the congress which met recently at Geneva, the chances are that next summer the Capital will be the meeting place of the delegates, who represent practically every country in the world which has a parliamentary system of government. They meet annually to exchange ideas on legislative matters, and some of the weighty questions to be considered this summer deal with world peace, reduction of armaments and the refugee problem.

De Balasy Sailing On Queen Mary

Mrs. Fish and her subdeb daughter, Elizabeth Fish, will join Representative Fish in Norway. They sailed recently to spend the summer at Fontainebleau, and Miss Fish will remain abroad this winter to study in Paris.

When the Queen Mary leaves July 19 for Europe, there will be a number of Washington residents on board. Among them is Anthony de Balasy, retiring Counselor of the Hungarian Legation, who is going to his new post at London. Popular M. de Balasy has been here six years, and in that time hardly a party could have been called complete without his presence. The Hungarian Minister, John Pelenyi, is returning this week from Hungary to relieve him of his duties. The Minister and Mme. Pelenyi have been vacationing abroad since early June.

Friends Console Miss Villard

A group of friends of Miss Dorothea Villard gathered in the garden of her Georgetown residence yesterday to sympathize with her for a recent accident, in which she broke a bone in her foot.

Miss Villard came to Washington for a day or so to pack up her belongings and will leave tomorrow for the summer home in Connecticut of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Oswald Garrison Villard.

Everybody gathered in the small garden behind her N street apartment. Among those who dropped by were Mrs. Mondell Gregg, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Tittmann, Mr. and Mrs. Meade Fletcher, Miss Laura Tuckerman, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Lawton, Miss Marcia Umbsen, Gordon Tweedy, Harold Fangboner, Denys Smith, Webb Trimble and Harold Hinton.

Miss Villard, who welcomed her guests with her leg in a plaster cast, will return to Washington next fall to spend the winter, and has taken a house in Georgetown.

Anne Woodin Miner Becomes Wife of William H. Phipps

At a ceremony in Easthampton, L. I., yesterday afternoon, Miss Anne Woodin Miner, daughter of Mrs. Woodin Miner, of Easthampton, and Charles Miner, of Washington, became the bride of William Hamilton Phipps, son of Mrs. Louis Eugene Phipps, of Englewood, N. J.

The wedding took place in the Presbyterian Church, with the Rev. Ernest E. Els officiating. Escorted and given in marriage by her brother, Charles, the bride wore white satin adorned with rosepoint heirloom lace. She carried a bouquet of tearoses and lilies of the valley.

Following the ceremony there was a reception at Dune House, the home of the bride's maternal grandmother, Mrs. William H. Woodin, widow of the former Secretary of the Treasury. Upon their return from a honeymoon trip, Mr. Phipps and his bride will make their home in Englewood.

Grunewalds Leave Today on Long Trip

Mrs. Henry W. Grunewald of the Westchester and her daughters, the Misses Christine and Erna Grunewald, will leave today on a trip of several weeks which will take them thousands of miles.

They will go first to San Francisco to see the Golden Gate Exposition and will then visit Los Angeles. Later they will sail for several weeks in Honolulu. They will return by way of Seattle, stopping for a week at Banff and Lake Louise en route to the Capital, where they will arrive in time for the Misses Grunewald to resume their studies at Duke University.

Plans Trip to Bermuda

Hessler Studio.

One of the town's most attractive hostesses, Mrs. Robert Ash (above) and her husband are expecting to be off soon—first for a visit to the New York World's Fair and then for a stay in Bermuda. The trip to Gotham is scheduled for next week. Mr. and Mrs. Ash will return here before leaving for Bermuda early in August

Close-Holmes Wedding Held

The wedding of Mrs. Margaret Wood Close, of New York, daughter of Mrs. Garnett Mason Peters, of Liberty, Mo., and the late W. R. C. Wood, of Baltimore, to Donald W. B. Holmes, of Summit, N. J., son of Mrs. William D. Holmes, of Summit, and the late Mr. Holmes, took place yesterday in New York. The ceremony was performed in the home of Mrs. Close's brother, William R. C. Wood, of 25 East End avenue. The Rev. J. Donald Johnston officiated.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother. Mrs. Wood was her only attendant. Charles H. Holmes was best man.

Mrs. Holmes attended Dana Hall School in Wellesley, Mass. She formerly was married to Lieut. Comdr. Forrest Close, U. S. N., formerly of Washington, now stationed at Mare Island, Calif.

Mr. Holmes attended Hobart College.

Konitza to Leave For Swampscott

The former Minister of Albania, Faik Konitza, who still "morally" represents his country here, will leave his apartment in the Mayflower the first of next month for Swampscott, Mass.

Mr. Konitza, who has been in the United States since 1926, is virtually a "native" of Swampscott, having spent 14 summers at the resort. He plans to remain there until the third week in September.

Sometime this week Mr. Konitza plans to attend the presentation of Shakespeare's "The Tempest" at the Glen Echo Playhouse. Ted Smith, director of the Glen Echo players and Mr. Konitza are great friends. Mr. Smith was in Tirana, capital of Albania, when the Italians took over the city and consequently had much to tell Mr. Konitza, in regard to the bravery of the Albanians, upon his return to the United States.

Cummings Give Informal Dinner

Mr. and Mrs. Hugh S. Cumming, jr., who recently returned from Europe, entertained a few friends informally at dinner last night at their residence in Georgetown.

Mrs. Cumming's mother, Mrs. Frank West, has gone to her home in California to spend the summer. She is expected to return in the fall.

Eberharters to Fete Brenloves Tonight

Representative and Mrs. Herman P. Eberharter, of Pittsburgh, have as their guests for the weekend Mr. and Mrs. R. Rhode Brenlove, of that city, whom they will entertain at dinner tonight at the Army and Navy Country Club.

Also present will be Mr. and Mrs. Ted Wilcox, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Wakefield Smith and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Malcolmson.

Announce Birth

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Paul Herrmann, of 1430 Belmont street, announce the birth of a son, Arthur Paul, jr., on July 6 at Sibley Hospital. Mrs. Herrmann is the former Miss Isabelle Croson.

Mrs. Robert, Mrs. Gregg Will Visit Dude Ranches

Dude ranches are popular with members of Capital society this summer, and many of them are busy packing shirts and boots for several weeks of rest and health in the mountains of the West.

Mrs. Mondell Gregg expects to leave on Tuesday or Wednesday for a ranch at Sheridan, Wyo., which she visits every summer. Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Wood Robert, jr., are going out to Eaton's Ranch, and later Mrs. Robert may join Mrs. Gregg for a pack trip in the mountains.

Mr. Robert will return to Washington earlier than his wife.

R. T. Hagenbuckles On Wedding Trip

Mr. and Mrs. Roderick Theodore Hagenbuckle, who were married July 5, will make their home in West Newton, Mass., where he is an instructor at the Fessenden School, after a brief wedding trip.

Eunice Calhoon Becomes Bride

Before an altar banked with palms, ferns and summer flowers, Miss Eunice Winifred Calhoon became the bride of Harry Kent Underwood at 8 o'clock last night in the Foundry Methodist Church, with the Rev. Frederick Brown Harris officiating.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank W. Calhoon, of Midland, S. Dak., who were unable to attend the wedding. Mr. Underwood is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry L. Underwood.

Miss Mary Pontious played organ music throughout the ceremony. The bride wore a white silk marquisette frock made on princess lines with satin madallions appliqued on the train. Her finger-tip-length veil was held in place by a Juliet cap of seed pearls. She carried white roses and lilies of the valley.

Mary Helen Blair Is Maid of Honor

Miss Mary Helen Bair, gowned in yellow marquisette, was maid of honor. Her frock was made with a tight bodice and bouffant skirt. She wore matching lace mitts and a headdress of veiling topped with talisman roses and carried an arm bouquet of talisman roses.

Miss Dorothy Coyner, cousin of the bride, and Miss Martha Vaughn were bridesmaids. They wore turquoise blue ensembles and carried yellow roses. Their caps were of seed pearls.

Ross S. Gleeson was best man, and ushers were John H. Alexander, E. Warren Colison, Lee I. Huntzberger and W. Harvey Thirloway.

To Make Home On Fuller Street

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bridegroom's parents. Mrs. Underwood wore a tearose chiffon frock and a corsage of pink roses. Assisting at the reception were Mrs. Harry L. Moffett, Mrs. Warren Colison, Mrs. Harvey Thirloway, Miss Lois Kays and Mrs. Ross Gleeson.

When the young couple left for their honeymoon in the Pocono Mountains of Pennsylvania, the bride was wearing a redingote of green and black print with accessories of white. Her corsage was of gardenias. After August 1 they will be at home at 1630 Fuller street northwest.

Mr. Underwood attended American University and is now a student of George Washington University Law School.

Bastille Day Parties Held Here and in N. Y.

Ambassador Attends Festivities at Fair; Embassy Scene of One Commemoration; Bentons Give Anniversary Garden Fete

THE CELEBRATION of Bastille Day, the French national holiday, wasn't limited to France alone, but was observed yesterday at two parties in Washington and in festivities at the World's Fair in New York.

The French Ambassador, Count Rene de Saint Quentin, journeyed to Manhattan for the celebration of "French Day" at the Fair grounds. Meanwhile, in Washington, several hundred French citizens from the Capital, Maryland and Virginia, gathered to drink a toast to France at the embassy on Kalorama road. Jacques Truelle, Counselor, presided. Several other members of the staff were present.

Another party, which, while strictly American, celebrated the French "Fourth of July," was given by Dr. and Mrs. Frederick Benton at their residence on Reservoir road. They make a practice of celebrating the quatorze juillet because Mrs. Benton is of Norman-French descent, and to carry on a custom established years ago by a friend, since dead, who, also of French ancestry, wished to keep alive the national association.

French Envoy Returning Today

Festivities at the World's Fair began at 11:30 o'clock yesterday morning, when the Ambassador and his party, which included the French Consul General in New York, Count Charles de Ferry de Fontnouvelle, and the French High Commissioner at the Fair, Gov. Gen. Marcel Oliver, opened the ceremonies.

The party was escorted to Perylon Hall to sign the guest book and reviewed units of the Army, Navy and Marine Corps before a luncheon given at the hall by Mr. and Mrs. Grover Whalen.

At afternoon ceremonies, the Ambassador gave a speech, and watched a program of French music with folk dances and a parade of French sailors from the division of French cruisers in New York Harbor. He will return to the Capital today.

Benton Fete Draws Crowd

The Benton's home on Reservoir road, overlooking the Potomac, is a perfect site for a summer garden party. Yesterday afternoon, guests gathered in the house, on the veranda and in the garden, which slopes gently down to the river.

Mrs. Benton received, wearing a sky-blue dimity frock of garden party length. About her neck were several leis of cream and blue flowers—flown from Hawaii for the party. Dr. Benton dashed hither and yon to see that everyone was taken care of. A potent rum punch was on hand, as well as the usual quota of whisky and soda. Guests delighted in making their own sandwiches of rye bread, turkey and Virginia ham.

The white frame house—which is 180 years old and served as a field hospital during the Revolutionary War—lends itself beautifully to entertaining. It is filled with many fascinating objects which the Bentons have picked up on their many travels.

Dr. Benton once was in the Navy and is still interested in it, as is shown by the rock garden—built in the shape of an anchor.

Gowned in a pale pink chiffon, Mrs. Henry Evans assisted at the punch bowl while, not far away, her husband was tending to the wants of the guests. Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Burke were there, as were Dr. and Mrs. Robert Oden, William Russell and his daughter, Virginia; Miss Marguerite Monteiro, former Minister and Mrs. Preston McGoodwin, the Commercial Secretary of the Chilean Embassy and Senora de Campbell, and their daughter, Eleanor. Eleanor's frock was of white eyelet over a dark slip and she wore her bewitching red curls in the up-swept hair-do.

Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Lowrey were accompanied by Mrs. Lowrey's mother, Mrs. A. C. Bernside. A fetching pink felt hat, resembling a jockey cap, completed Mrs. Lowrey's ensemble. Late sessions of Congress are keeping Congressmen away from parties these days—and yesterday was no exception. Senator Arthur Capper phoned his hostess at the last minute, saying a roll-call in the Senate would prevent him from attending.

Cabinet Spends Week-end Here

With one exception—the Secretary of War and Mrs. Harry H. Woodring—cabinet couples are remaining quietly at home this week-end.

It is not often that the Secretary of State and Mrs. Cordell Hull are able to "get away from it all," and this week-end is no different. They are remaining in the air-chilled apartment of the Carlton.

Off on a pleasant jaunt in search of antiques, are the Secretary of War and Mrs. Woodring. They left by motor yesterday for Hagerstown, Frederick and a number of other Maryland towns famous for old pieces of furniture.

Leaving early in August the Secretary and Mrs. Woodring, accompanied by their three children, will go to Fitchburg, Mass., where they plan to spend the summer with Mrs. Woodring's parents, Senator and Mrs. Marcus Coolidge. Mrs. Woodring plans to remain until October 1.

As is his usual custom the Secretary of the Treasury, Henry A. Morgenthau, jr., joined his family at Fishkill farm, up State New York, for the week-end.

Attorney General Frank L. Murphy finds duties so pressing that he is remaining in town.

The Postmaster General, James A. Farley, has joined his family in New York for the week-end. The Farleys are busy with preparations for their European jaunt which they plan to start the end of this month. They will visit the United States Ambassador to Poland and Mrs. Anthony Drexel Biddle.

The Secretary of Interior and Mrs. Ickes are at their farm at Olney, Md., where they will remain the entire summer. They will not go to Bar Harbor, Me., as recently was erroneously reported.

Regatta Sponsors Arrange Cruise On River July 28

A gold cup royal moonlight sail down the river on Friday night, July 28, has been arranged by the sponsors committee of the President's Cup Regatta Association as its gala summer event. On this occasion, the good ship City of Washington will make its stately voyage down stream in the manner of an ancient "barge of state" in which former British rulers traveled up and down the Thames River in days long since gone by.

Many old-time river customs have been discovered by the sponsors committee for this moonlight sail, and there will be a queen and her court as part of the gay scene, with troubadors strolling the decks and entertaining not only the royal party but all the guests on the trip.

As the guests arrive at the boat that evening, they will be received by a group of the officers and directors of the President's Cup Regatta Association and their wives, headed by Mr. and Mrs. John A. Remon, Dr. and Mrs. R. Lyman Sexton, Mr. and Mrs. H. P. Somerville, Mr. and Mrs. James A. Councilor, Dr. and Mrs. G. Bache Gill, Mr. and Mrs. L. Gordon Leech, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas E. Lodge, and Mr. and Mrs. William C. Shelton.

A fun fair, such as was popular in the days of Merrie England of the past; dancing and a deck show, and other light entertainment will be the order of the evening, with the hurricane deck reserved for those who prefer to loll in steamer chairs, and listen to the strains of song only in the light of the moon.

Mary Mail Haworth's

Depressed by Scholastic Mediocrity, Girl of 18 Asks How to Make a Success of Her Life

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a girl of 18 who was graduated from high school this June. I have been told that I am pretty but until a year ago I did not have many friends, due to my reserved manner. Realizing my unhappiness, my mother practically forced me to go out socially, so that finally I overcame much of my inferiority feeling, "made" a sorority, and now have many intimate friends.

But this brought a new problem. In making these friends, I let my school work slip and barely managed to pass, graduating almost at the bottom of my class. Result—I cannot enter teachers' college, as I had originally planned, and my mother, who supports me, cannot afford an expensive college. However, she is considering a college in this city, which is accredited but, fortunately, being new, has a low tuition fee . . .

Needless to say, mother is very disappointed in me, and that hurts, as she is one of the best mothers that anyone could have. She has given me more than most girls have. But I am certain my lack of attractiveness to men has been the real reason for my recent scholastic failure. I was in public school for two years and never once had date. In my senior year I didn't care, because the boys seemed so childish, but even so, they were not attracted to me.

Recently, I have had a few dates with college boys, and with some boys a few years older, but they were not much interested, because of my obvious lack of social experience. I feel that I am wasting the best years of my life. Do you think I still have a chance to make a success of myself? And don't you think that college will develop my personality so that I will be more attractive to boys? Sincerely, ANNE.

Consider the Tortoise

DEAR ANNE: The major flaw in your personality, perhaps, is over-weening, unconcealed preoccupation with self. Only an introvert, who lacked that natural or acquired sense of proportion and social perspective which gives effortless rise to a relieving sense of humor, when contemplating the tragi-comic adventure of living, could ask with straight face: "Do you think that I—(at 18)—still have a chance to make a success of myself?" I might counter by asking, "How many persons are sucesses at the age of 18?"

It may encourage you to know that one is making real progress in living if, by the age of 18, he is aware of, honest enough to admit, and constructively dissatisfied with, such weak points as may exist in his personality and performance. When, in addition, he is fired with determination to waste no time in remedying these handicaps, or in developing compensatory skills on other fronts—you may be sure he is a person who is gathering his forces "to go places," and one who will give a splendid accounting of his talents in the final analysis.

However, self-assessment in order to be really helpful must be completely honest; and I question the validity of your assumption that lack of popularity is responsible for your scholastic mediocrity. Ordinarily, the reverse is true; the unpopular boy or girl of average or superior mentality compensates for lack of social acceptance by excelling academically. He or she becomes something of an acknowledged "grind" or "bluestocking,"—standing at the head of classes as an unconscious means of compelling group attention in another way.

The unalterable fact of the matter may be that you have only moderate intellectual and social gifts, and that you will always have to work hard for whatever recognition you achieve along either line. This would mean that you should henceforth cultivate all your resources and opportunities with diligent economy, making every move, effort and contact count. But remember the fable of the race between the tortoise and the hare. The slow-footed tortoise got there first, by indefatigable, unswerving plodding, whereas his friend the hare, who had every natural qualification for winning in a walk, frittered his chances away in sheer overconfident lack of application.

Which reminds me to say that you should not count on college life, as such, to develop your personality and make you more attractive to men. It should bring you into contact with a wide variety of masculine types—but the burden is upon yourself to run those contacts into friendships and romances. The way to a boy's heart—as has been so often said, in so many ways—is through his eyes and his ears. He is a fall-guy for the girl who treats him to undisguised interest and warm admiration, gracefully expressed; and she lures him within hailing distance, to begin with, by her optical appeal—by her prettiness or her chic, her immaculate grooming and her appearance of radiant good health.

Nowadays, a girl can scarcely expect to be popular with men unless she dances like a nymph, and excels in one or several such sports as swimming, golf, tennis, ping-pong, horseback riding, boating, skiing or badminton, for instance. The college boy, as a rule, pays court to a girl for two reasons—each as important, in his opinion, as the other. One, for her romantic, sentimental or emotional appeal to his senses; and, two, because of the pride he experiences in showing her off—as a socially accomplished creature—before the gaze of others.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Today's Health Talk

Relaxing Advised As Way to Reduce Blood Pressure

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

FOR SOME years Dr. Edmund Jacobson, of Chicago, has been advocating the value of relaxation. His little book, You Must Relax, has helped a great many nervous people. Now he advocates it for high blood pressure.

Whatever else may be said for or against the treatment, certainly the gospel of relaxation is one which seems to fit into the needs of our present world.

So far as relaxation is applied to high blood pressure, we can start with the certainty that blood pressure varies directly with the size and spasm of certain of the blood vessels. Thus, if all the large arteries in the abdomen suddenly narrow their size, the blood pressure will have to go up. It would be the same principle with a water faucet. Assuming that the water pressure at the source is the same, if you put a smaller tube on the faucet, the water will come out of that tube with more force.

Exercise One Cause

One of the things that cause the blood vessels to contract and thus raise blood pressure is exercise, or the contraction of muscles. A brief bit of fairly strenuous exercise will raise blood pressure. Any doctor knows that a patient's pressure is higher when he first walks into the office than it will be a little later. When a patient is put in a hospital, the pressure is higher the first few days than on subsequent days, especially if the patient stays in bed. That the blood pressure is lowered in sleep is a common observation.

In fact, about the only sure-fire way to lower blood pressure is to put the patient at rest. Therefore, the relaxation treatment would seem to be sensible.

To relax, it is not necessary to lie down. Relaxation in the sitting position for half an hour was seen to reduce the blood pressure 24 points in one person under observation.

In Quiet Room

It is best, however, to have the patient lie down in a quiet room free from disturbing factors. The couch is enclosed to form this. He is told to relax all his groups of skeletal muscles, one after the other. First the frown on his forehead is relaxed, then the face, then the neck muscles. Then the arms and chest and back, and then the legs. The blood pressure is taken automatically every few minutes.

With normal subjects there is an initial drop in pressure which reaches its height in about 30 minutes; it consists in a fall of 10 to 15 points.

If frequently takes some training and patience to teach a patient to relax. And some, in fact, of nervous temperament never learn to do it completely. In those who can learn and have high blood pressure normally, the results are almost universally good. The reduction in pressure stays down moderately well if the patient refrains from excitement and exertion.

America Takes Fashion Lead In Men's Summer Attire

England Bows to Hollywood in This Field Say Local Stylist; Distinctive Sports Clothes Now Sought by Vacationists

AMERICA has taken the lead in men's styles for leisure and cool, comfortable sports attire. Hollywood really rules the roost in sportswear, and even England, long recognized as an authority on men's fashions, looks to the cinema for the finest things in this line, although the choicest English fabrics still are used to make such clothing. California's sunny climate, and the type of clothes chosen by the movie people, are responsible.

While men once may have taken a rather casual attitude toward their sports clothes, they now are seeking aristocratic and distinctive styling, according to the proprietor of one of Washington's leading men's shops. Sports clothes today which are increasingly in demand during the summer months for country club, cruise and other care-free activities, are far different from the once cumbersome, bulky apparel men wore, this clothier points out.

Coolness, Comfort Wanted

The comfort-conscious man wants cooling clothes, with lightness of texture, beauty of coloring and perfect styling. Style and workmanship are essential to summer clothing because of the lightweight fabrics. They must be smart and casual. Sports jackets are longer, so that they cover the seat of the trousers. They are no longer belted, but have a plain back, and a center vent in most styles. They are broad-shouldered, the sleeves are full and tapered to the cuff—really an adaptation of the old leg-o-mutton sleeves. Sleeves are worn shorter and allow the shirt cuff to show. The smartest jackets are made from soft materials in stripes, checks and plaids, and also the conventional herringbone weave.

Gone are the days of the striped flannel trousers and a tweed jacket to see you through, according to this local authority. Soft pastel shades are now the smart thing to wear with the correct sport coat. The trousers are pleated, handstitched, and all trousers have zipper openings. Silk gabardine is a favorite for sports trousers in natural tan, royal blue, blue gray and soft pastels. Tropical worsteds, lighter than gabardine, are smart, and popular colors are green, blue, gray and tan. Real Bermuda doe-skin, an English fabric which has been made at Cam since 1532, is the most expensive and most luxurious fabric on the market today, and may also be had in the necessary pastel colors.

White Worsted Is Tops

The aristocrat of summer suits today is the white tropical worsted suit, which comes to us from England. It does not wrinkle like the average white suit, such as linen. It seems to have replaced the white gabardine, which defeated its own purpose, because it was hot. This patrician among summer suits is made double-breasted, with broad shoulders of a draped model. With this suit is worn a white broadcloth shirt with generous collar and turned-back French cuffs, fastened with links. Ties of colorful English foulard with matching crepe silk kerchief are the proper accessories. Sports shoes of two-tone or all white should complete the ensemble.

The correctly dressed man has become very conscious in his choice of sports jacket and slacks and also of his accessories, says this local style authority. It is rare now to see a contrasting sports jacket and trousers that do not embody a color theme. Sometimes the tan or green or brown or gray of the sports jacket mixture is adopted for the slacks, and it carries through with accessories of hat, shirt, tie and shoes.

The distinctive chox striped light-weight flannel sport shirt from California is very popular, and is made up in tans, browns, blues, reds, greens and pastel shades. Tropical worsted sports shirts in pastel shades are also worn with lightweight gabardines.

Shorter Skirts, Says Hollywood

Hollywood, Calif.—The latest flashes from Paris say skirts are getting longer, but Orry-Kelly, currently designing clothes for Zorina and Gloria Dickson to wear in "On Your Toes," predicts knee-length skirts by fall.

He further declares that some of these very short skirts will be bloused under in harem fashion, others will be decked with tiers or flounces, bustle suggestion, Dutch pockets, or tiny paniers puffed out on the sides.

Your Figure Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain.

Mild Daily Exercise Will Prevent Need Of Hard Calisthenics

A DOCTOR we know says that if the average woman would take a little mild exercise every day she would never need vigorous calisthenics.

Such a program takes a bit longer. It won't turn you into a sylph in time for your vacation! But there is a great deal to be said for it . . . it's as sure as the tortoise. If you just go along, doing your little stint of easy exercise every day, the first thing you know there will be an astonishing improvement in the lines of your figure.

And, about the same time, you will begin to feel very much better. You will have lost that languid, don't-care feeling along with your softness. Ultimately, the small amount of unhurried exercise you have been taking daily will have a remarkably tonic effect.

Aids Ability to Relax

But one of the best things about this easygoing program is its tendency to increase one's ability to relax. In this hectic age, it's an open question as to which we need most, slimming or soothing. And exercise can be as rhythmical and soothing as a lullaby. In the following set, there are stretching exercises to relax the muscles and relieve tension in the nerve centers back of the neck, between the shoulders, and in the backs of the legs.

Sit on the floor with the legs together and straight out in front. Without straining, let the hands rest on the ankles. The trunk should droop forward rather than bend, and the muscles should be contracted only enough to hold the sitting position. With the head hanging limply and hands resting on legs, gradually move the trunk backward until you are flat on the back on the floor, hands at sides, completely relaxed. Lie there for a moment, then repeat.

Collapsing Exercises

Now stand up and stretch arms high overhead. Suddenly collapse into a squatting position. Rise slowly to the upright position and go on collapsing.

Wall-stretching is both slimming and relaxing. Stand with the right side against a wall, right arm stretched up the wall. Slowly push the hand up the wall, stretching in the middle and rising on the toes to do so. Relax for a moment, and repeat. After five times stretch the left side. Then stand with the face to the wall and stretch both hands up the wall. This time, keep the heels on the floor and the hips in line.

Finish your exercises by standing with the back pressed flat against the wall, arms stretched up on wall overhead. Suddenly let the trunk fall forward, hands and head dangling. Straighten up and repeat.

Balances Nervous System

Exercises of this type are recommended for both the placid and the highly strung, for they not only keep the muscles in tone but they afford a balance for the nervous system.

9:00 P. M.

"Now if you'll all crowd in here—I think there are almost enough seats—I'll run off these reels to show you just what the wife and I did on our vacation.

"Wait now—Mr. Bunch, can you squeeze in between these two ladies on this piano bench? . . . Oh yes, and here's the ironing stool for you, Mrs. Oxen . . . and here's another arm of a chair for somebody.

"Now then, here we are loading up the old bus to go. The man with the fishing tackle is my wife's brother George, from Detroit. That's his wife in the goggles. And of course there's the Better Half with the thermos bottle.

"Here, folks, is a close-up of George and the fishing tackle . . . What's that bundle under your arm, George? . . . Doesn't look like fishing tackle to me . . . Now then, here we are in the car all ready to go with Yours Truly at the wheel . . . And to make things clearer for you, here's a map of the route we took down to the bay.

"Now then we're off. Here we go . . . out through Center Junction—see the crowds on Main street—and Cedarburg . . . and Geranium Grove . . . and—oh yes, this is the barbecue stand where we stopped for some soda pop . . . and then Brushville . . . and now then we'll take you on a little tour of Pipp City where we stopped for lunch."

9:30 P. M.

"And now at last we are in the land of our dreams. Here's a close-up of our cottage with Yours Truly carrying in the groceries . . . and here's another close-up of George and the fishing tackle . . . And if here isn't Grace—that's George's wife, the one in the goggles—and the Missus all dressed up—or rather undressed, I should say—for a swim! We'll now take you right out on the beach to watch our private water carnival . . ."

10 P. M.

"Now we're starting out on a fishing trip. It's 4 o'clock in the morning and old Bill Leathergood has come with the boat. Here's a close-up of Bill. He's an oysterman and quite a character. You'll see a lot more of Bill later.

"Here's a close-up of the boat . . . and here's George in his big boots and leather jacket with the fishing tackle . . . Now here's another close-up of the boat and Yours Truly with the fishing tackle . . . Now we're out in the bay and here's a very close close-up of George casting his line . . . Got anything yet, George? . . . While we're waiting on George to land a whopper, we'll show you some shots of the water and the other fisherman."

10:30 P. M.

"Now here we are coming in with our first day's catch. The fish weren't biting much today but George has a 10-pound bluefish. Here's a close-up of George and the fish . . . And here's a close-up of Your Truly and a few herring the wife especially wanted . . . And here's another close-up of Bill Leathergood. He's quite a character.

"Now we're weighing the fish . . . and here we are cleaning it . . . and here's a close-up of the Better Half putting the fish in the skillet . . . And here we are eating it. Don't choke on that bone, George!"

"And now here are George and Yours Truly stretching out for a nap while the women folk go down to the wild waves to swim. They're taking the movie camera with them and the next reel will show you some more life among the mermaids . . ."

11 P. M.

"Here we are starting out for a picnic at Crawdad Cove . . . The other couple are a Mr. and Mrs. Zimp from Pittsburgh who had the cottage next ours. They were very fine people. He's in the hardware business. Old Bill Leathergood is going to take us across the bay—here's another close-up of Bill . . . He's really a card.

"Now here we are getting in the boat . . . and here we are out on the water. Those fishermen in that boat we just passed are two fellows we met from Cumberland. I've forgotten their names . . . and now here we are at the cove . . . Here's a close-up of the Zimp's . . . and here's one of Grace and Mrs. Zimp and the Missus in their swim suits—better watch out for Hollywood scouts, girls! . . . and here's one of George and Bill Leathergood . . . and one of Yours Truly and Bill Leathergood . . . and here's one of Old Bill by himself—Wait, Mrs. Oxon! You're not leaving? . . . No, no, Mr. Bunch! . . . No, it's early yet! Besides, there's a lot more picnic shots and you haven't seen the big day's fishing yet—the day George landed the 40-pound hardhead!"

Improve Your Tennis Strokes

WHAT A FIZZLE this tennis date turned out to be! Dick politely pretends he wants to rest—but the truth is he can't stand any more of Ann's dreadful playing.

A shame to be known as a dub, to miss out on good times because you can't handle a racket properly, have no control over your shots. It's simple to teach yourself to play a good game of tennis, correct those faults.

Practice batting balls to a friend who serves as "pitcher." At first use a straight stick or bat. If you keep your eyes on the ball, but hit it not hard but with a smooth, easy swing; you soon learn control—can send the ball accurately back to the pitcher.

When you switch to a racket—even easier to hit the ball, control your shots. The proper grips—shown in our diagrams—come naturally as you practice. When you bat from the right shoulder you develop the forehand grip, palm toward the net. When you bat from the left shoulder you develop the backhand—back of the hand toward the net.

Then on to learn the different strokes, footwork—and you're ready to meet skilled friends.

No need to fear even ace players, if you have studied the numbered system of strategy—simple charts which show how to make clever plays, put your opponent on the spot. Rules? You want to be sure of them, too.

In our 40-page booklet, "How to Improve Your Tennis," Mercer Beasley, famous teacher of many champions, gives complete directions and diagrams for good tennis. Explains strokes, footwork, offensive and defensive tennis. Has charts teaching tennis strategy, official rules, pointers for tournaments. For beginners, advanced players.

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes

Stella Unger, Modern Live Wire Business Woman, Has Made Name in Seven Years

Aboard Santa Fe "Chief", July 14.

WELL PAST Kansas City on our daring dashing into the Far West, where the Clark Gables still roam the range in their native State and you actually have to push a button to get ice, our traveling companion, Stella Unger, is feeling chipper after a tough headache, and old Massa Hall, the mate, has given up hunting the Lamarrs and is testing Western ale.

ALICE HUGHES

Stella is one of the most remarkable women in New York. Born to money and married young, she started in business only seven years ago. A bundle of live electric wires, generating ideas as you and I merely breathe, she has become an outstanding personality in the radio, song-writing and magazine fields—still in her mid-thirties and lovely to look at. On our current Hollywood trek she is plotting against the peace and comfort of the movie magnates and their myrmidons. Let them beware, is my tip.

I'm always a bit worried about girls of Stella's exceptional type. Tauter than fiddle-strings, minds never at rest and spirits soaring, I am always afraid that any minute they will ignite from spontaneous combustion like so many celluloid collars in a tropical sun. But here we are in Kansas, in compartment H, car 192, on the dear old chief, and Unger is pushing strong. Wonder-woman, without a doubt, but a bit worriesome to old shoes like Hughes. If anything happens, I'll wire you from Albuquerque.

GIRL ABOUT AMERICA—Sitting across from us in the diner this noon were two handsome Chinese women, evidently mother and daughter. Tastefully dressed, they were, and both wearing strings of beautiful pearls. We accepted them as genuine, without a quibble. Strange thing, that I feel that way when I see Orientals wearing pearls, and I feel exactly the same when I behold wealthy and tasteful South Americans wearing diamonds. Real, without a doubt. Is this smart, or am I just the conventional sucker for types-plus-ornaments?

Spouse Hall was not originally booked for this trip to Hollywood, but came along on a rain-check and his own bankroll. And what do you think he wants most of all out there? Merely to have a little visit with Ginger Rogers, whom he has known for some years, and to tell her how happy he is at her growth as an actress and dancer in the past five years. Big crushes come and go fast, but I guess his admiration for the McMath kid, out of Missouri and Texas, is a fixed quantity.

THE MATINEE idol hit of New York right now is Lawrence Olivier, the fine English actor who smashed on the screen in "Wuthering Heights" and has now been appearing opposite Katherine Cornell in "No Time for Comedy," and nearly stealing the show from that superb actress. Tonight he leaves the cast to return to England, and into the part steps Francis Lederer, that Czech dream boy from Hollywood. But Olivier will be back on our stage or screen come fall.

COMMON COMPLAINT—too many fashion shows are only for cuties sized 12-14-16. Now a big New York store runs a show ONLY for women who are women, in dress size. It goes like the proverbial breeze.

U. S. Food Expert Offers Favorite Recipe—Pecan Pie

By Martha Ellyn.
The Post Food Editor

Favorite recipes of leading home economists of Washington are presented daily in this column.

A DESSERT that deserves a crown of laurel is the pecan pie. It makes one think of the mellow glow of plantation life. The name itself is one to conjure with. Pecan pie is the favorite food of our guest editor today, Elizabeth Fuller Whiteman.

Mrs. Whiteman

Mrs. Whiteman has been on the staff of the foods and nutrition division of the United States Bureau of Home Economics since her graduation in 1929 from the University of Iowa. She was born and reared in Princeton, Mo. Mrs. Whiteman is the author of many publications, among them being "Nuts and Ways to Use Them," "Honey and Some of Its" Uses," "Cooking the Potato," "Soybeans for the Table," "Weights of Food Materials Used in Food Preparation," "A Study of the Waste in Preparation and in Cooking of Fresh Vegetables and the Fuel Consumed."

The following recipe is the one Mrs. Whiteman gives The Post Food readers.

Pecan Pie

Beat 3 eggs, add ½ cup sugar, 1 cup dark corn sirup, ⅛ teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon vanilla, and ¼ cup melted butter or other fat. Place 1 cup pecans in the bottom of an unbaked piecrust. Add the filling and bake slowly in a moderate oven, 350 degrees, for 50 to 60 minutes. The nuts will rise to the top of the pie filling and form a crusted layer.

(Monday—Miss Alma Spenson will give her favorite recipe.)

This is the true God, and eternal life." (I John 5:20.)

District Chinese Raise $8,000 For Community Church Edifice

Group Is Now Negotiating For Purchase of Midcity Site, Dr. Hung, Its Pastor, Says

The Chinese Community Church here may soon realize its long-cherished ambition for a permanent house of worship, The Post was informed last night.

Dr. C. C. Hung

According to Dr. C. C. Hung, pastor, negotiations are now under way for purchase of a midcity site, comprising a residence and adjoining lot, the former to be renovated and used as a meeting place until sufficient funds are available for construction of a new building.

The parishioners are proud of the fact that, while appeals for their war-stricken countrymen have drawn heavily upon individual resources, they have still been able—with the co-operation of many non-Chinese supporters—to raise over $8,000 in three years toward a building fund.

The congregation, now utilizing the parish hall of Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church for Sunday afternoon sessions, will hold its annual outdoor service in Palisades Park, August 6. During 1938 it sponsored scores of interesting programs, such as a play-celebration marking the third anniversary of the church's organization; Saturday afternoon church benefit teas; annual Sunday School teachers' dinner, and Christmas, Easter and other seasonal events.

The Chinese language school, where American-born Chinese youngsters learn their native tongue, and where their parents are taught English, will reopen in August under the leadership of S. Y. Leung, now instructor of a similar school in Seattle, and a graduate of Lingnan University, China. Dr. Hung teaches the English classes.

Evelyn Lee

Meeting two hours daily, six days a week, the school was formerly conducted by Miss King Ho-chue, who received her master's degree from George Washington University in June, and who will matriculate at Hartford Theological Seminary this fall. Her ambition is to become a religious education teacher in a Chinese university.

A heavy percentage of local Chinese are enrolled in the congregation, which boasts a Sunday School membership of 236 and an average church attendance of 150—very commendable since the Washington Chinese community is comparatively small.

Earl Lee Gim

Sunday School officials include Earl Lee Gim, president; Harold Lee, first vice chairman; Richard Chan, second vice chairman; Lee Lun, treasurer; George Lee, English secretary; Joseph Lee, Chinese secretary, and Rose Lee Sing, attendance secretary.

The young people's department is led by Carter Moy, president and Miss Evelyn Lee, secretary.

E. S. Lewis, Calvary Baptist churchman, and for 25 years a supporter of local Chinese work, fills the position of attendance secretary for the adult division, while Mrs. Hung, San Francisco-born wife of the minister, leads the young people's senior unit. Miss Elizabeth Price is superintendent of the primary-kindergarten group, and the intermediate division is under the supervision of Miss Linda Carver.

The young people's and junior choirs, directed by Mrs. Raymond Smith and Mrs. Charles R. Madison and the Girl Reserves, which meet at the Y. W. C. A., are active units at the Chinese church. Plans are now being laid under the leadership of Mrs. Hung and Mrs. Ida Lee for a mothers' club.

One of Washington's most brilliant and popular clergymen, Dr. Hung, served as associate pastor in charge of Chinese work at the Central Methodist Church in Detroit prior to coming here in 1935. He also was pastor of a Chinese congregational church in San Diego, Calif. And received his B. A. degree from San Diego State College. He was at one time Chinese Y. M. C. A. secretary in Honolulu.

Richard Chan

Dr. Hung has been educated at Columbia University; Pui-Ching Baptist Academy, Canton, and Takwah Theological Seminary. He came to America in 1925. He and Mrs. Hung have two children, Wie Ling, 6, and Wei Ken, 3, and reside at 3615 Warder street northwest.

The Board of Managers, which comprises 37 non-Chinese members of local Protestant churches, and 12 members of the Chinese Community Church, will be headed by Fred J. Rossiter beginning August 1. He succeeds Dr. Edward H. Pruden, pastor of First Baptist Church, and former chairman, who was recently named president of the Washington Federation of Churches. Dr. Pruden will serve as vice chairman.

Dr. Daugherty To Speak at 'Y.M.' Outdoor Service

The Rev. Simpson B. Daugherty, D. D., pastor of Memorial United Brethren Church, will address the Y. M. C. A.-sponsored service tomorrow at 4 p. m. in Lincoln Park on East Capitol street.

Dr. Pruden To Continue Sermon Series

He and Wife and Dr. Weaver to Attend Conclave at Atlanta

Continuing his messages on "Mountains Made Famous by the Life of Our Lord," Dr. Edward Hughes Pruden will preach on "The Mount of the Miracle" tomorrow morning at First Baptist Church.

At the half-hour evening service beginning at 8 o'clock, Dr. Pruden will discuss "The Sin of Remaining as You Are."

Dr. and Mrs. Pruden and Dr. Rufus Weaver are among those going to Atlanta next week for the Baptist World Alliance sessions, which 50,000 Baptists are expected to attend.

Fifth. Dr. John E. Briggs, pastor, has returned from the Baptist assembly at Braddock Heights, Md., where he has been teaching a book, and will preach at the 11 a. m. service on "Things To Be Forgotten," and at 7:45 p. m. on "Standing By." Members of the senior B. Y. will assist with the evening service.

The midweek prayer and praise service will be conducted by the senior deacons since the pastor will be attending the Baptist World Alliance meeting at Atlanta.

Takoma Park. The Rev. William E. La Rue is giving a series of devotional sermons this month from the Psalms. In the morning the theme will be, "Unless I Had Believed."

Metropolitan. "Writing Your Obituary" is the theme the Rev. Robert Savage has chosen for the morning message. This is the third in a series of sermons on the Epistle of Paul to the Philippians.

An attractive musical program has been arranged for the evening, including an inspirational song service led by the Rev. Mr. Savage and selections by the ladies' quartet of the Fountain Memorial Baptist Church. Mr. Savage will speak on "Building Houses."

Calvary. The Rev. Frank E. Johnston, jr., assistant minister, will speak in the morning on "The Heart of Religion," and in the evening on "Where is Your Strength?" He will be assisted at the latter service by Miss Marguarette Marlowe and Leo Berndt.

The Rev. Mr. Johnston occupied the pulpit of the First Baptist Church, of Middletown, Ohio, last Sunday morning and following the service was unanimously called as pastor of the church, the former pastor of the church having retired in May.

The Rev. Mr. Johnston has accepted the call and will begin his duties there September 17. Mr. Johnston has been the assistant minister of this church since January, 1937. He was married to Miss Mary Frances Stallings, of this city, in November of that same year. The Rev. and Mrs. Johnston will remain in Washington until about September 11 and then take up their residence in Middletown.

Little Stories about GREAT HYMNS

"IF THOU BUT SUFFER GOD TO GUIDE THEE"
*George Neumark

"If thou but suffer God to guide thee,
And hope in Him through all thy ways;
He'll give thee strength, whate'er betide thee,
And bear thee through the evil days;
Who trusts in God's unchanging love
Builds on the Rock that naught can move."

*George Neumark, the author of this chorale, lived in Hamburg, Germany, about 1650. Extreme poverty forced him to pawn all his earthly possessions including his cherished violincello. Later receiving a position as Ambassador to Sweden, he was enabled to redeem his 'cello. Thankful for this favor, he wrote the words and music for this chorale.

Blondes Haven't a Chance as First Three Places in Contest Go to Dark-Haired Girls; Evelyn Foster to Compete Later at Atlantic City

Three brunettes carried off the prizes last night as a 19-year-old Central High School graduate was crowned "Miss Washington of 1939" before 700 spectators aboard the Wilson Liner City of Washington.

Winner was Evelyn Foster, of 1519 Connecticut avenue, 110 pounds of loveliness, who is 5 feet 4 inches tall. She will compete as the Washington entry in the contest for "Miss America," to be held in Atlantic City, Labor Day week-end.

"Wonderful!" was Evelyn's only comment.

Runner-up was 19-year-old Maxine Moore, of 1216 Twelfth street northwest, a graduate of Eastern High, and third in the group of 19 beauties was Toni Mann, also 19, of 1123 Fourteenth stret northwest, who previously had won the title of "Miss Virginia."

Nine judges selected the winner—eight men and a woman, Mary Harris, of The Post.

The girls first promenaded on the deck in evening gowns, then in bathing suits and finally appeared to sing, dance, and play the piano.

For their talent loud ovations greeted Ann Waple, who shimmied; Miss Moore, who sang and tap-danced; Toni Mann, and Kitty Bunch, who also sang.

A big cheer greeted the brief bow of Dorothy Parker, who last year was awarded the "Miss Washington" title.

For the winning beauty, there will be, in addition to the Atlantic City trip, a complete clothes outfit, and an appearance in the Capitol Theater's stage review, "Going Native."

Woman Asks Way, Gets That—and, $3

A woman who asked the direction of John Talbot, then picked his pocket of $3, was being sought by police last night. Talbot, who lives at 821 Randolph street northwest, said the woman drove up to the front of his home and inquired for a family named Johnson. Two small girls were in the machine, he said.

While they were talking, Talbot said, the woman placed her hand on his back and asked if he had a pain. After she had gone, he discovered $3 had been taken.

Monster's Bones Sought in Utah By Smithsonian

The Smithsonian Institution told yesterday of its latest animal hunt, but refrained from boasting that it plans to "bring 'em back alive."

The titanosaurus is the goal of an expedition now working in the Manti National Forest of Central Utah. This monster, as long as a 7-story building and weighing 20 tons, breathed its last nearly 80,000,000 years ago.

Dr. C. L. Gazin is in charge of explorations and hopes to bring back enough skeletal remains this summer to reconstruct the monster from nose to tail. The first titanosaurus fossils were found in the same region by a Geological Survey investigator in 1921.

Paleontologists believe that the beast was a rather stupid, inoffensive plant-eater.

Citizens Ask Delay on D. C. Merger

Federation Fears Action on Bill This Session Would Prevent Hearings

The Commissioners' "kitchen cabinet" yesterday completed a report on the Kennedy bill for reorganizing the local government as the Federation of Citizens Association appealed to Congress to withhold action on any reorganization bill at this session.

The report, which disapproves the proposal for a city manager, will be presented to the Commissioners for study as the reorganization conferees are scheduled to discuss the bill on Monday.

L. A. Carruthers, president of the federation, wrote to members of the Senate and House District committees stating "hasty action would preclude the probability of the citizens whom the bills so definitely affects, and the Congress itself, having a reasonable opportunity to study the bills and be heard thereon by the appropriation committees and officials."

The federation pointed out the citizens of Washington are "deeply interested in and greatly distressed" by reports that Congress may pass the reorganization bills which recently were introduced.

"The federation favors in principle modernizing and streamlining the District of Columbia government where such reorganization tends to greater efficiency and economy," Carruthers stated.

"Because of the actual length of the bills, the many principles and subjects affected and the great importance of this legislation to the District of Columbia, we are prompted to request that you aid the voteless atnd unrepresented citizens of Washington through delaying action on this legislation at the current session."

ICC Denies Montgomery Fare Increase

The Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday denied the increased bus fare scheduled to have been put into effect by the Capital Transit Co. on its Montgomery County lines July 16.

The increase was to have become effective on the lines terminating at Alta Vista, Montrose, Rockville and Washington Grove. The commission's report stated:

"It (the transit company) does not undertake to justify the proposed increased fares on the basis of comparison with the fares of similar distances on the lines of other motor carriers but relies entirely upon evidence which it submitted to show that it is in urgent need of additional revenues. No actual data were presented to show how much, if any, of respondent's operating losses may properly be attributed to its interstate operations."

According to the report, a witness for the transit company admitted during hearings that operating expenses of the Montgomery Bus Lines, Inc. (a subsidiary wholly owned by the transit company) were based upon allocation of costs between the Maryland company and its parent corporation. These expenses bore no direct relation to the actual operating expenses for the Montgomery County routes, the report stated.

Mutual Health Fee 'Too Steep,' AFGE Holds

Member Lodges May Join; U. S. Retirement Bill Praised

The District Department of the American Federation of Government Employes last night voted to reject as "too severe" for the pocketbooks of Government workers the Mutual Health Service plan of the District Medical Society.

Officers pointed out that, while the department itself disapproves the plan, any of the 78 member lodges may join if they desire.

Delegates criticized the plan's limitation of service to employes earning $2,000, if single, or $2,500, if married. The yearly fee of $24 was called "too steep."

The group hailed the Government employes retirement bill, passed yesterday by the House, as a victory for its legislative program. The bill provides optional retirement for most A. F. G. E. employes at the age of 60 and mandatory retirement at 70.

Capital News In Brief

Geysers Unfaithful

Never trust a geyser, the National Park Service warned yesterday—unless you want to eat your faith the next day.

The NPS should know, for it has been betrayed by geysers for a number of years. Two weeks ago, taking another chance, it assured the public that Whirligig and Constant—two leading spouters of the Yellowstone—had entered a dormant stage.

Before the ink was dry on its press releases, Whirligig erupted into a fine display. Then Constant started. As if that were insufficient, an unknown began showing off. A quick check showed the latter to have been on maps up to 1872. Quite moody, these spouters.

Bus Strikes Baby

June Miller, 3, of 813 L street northwest, was treated for abrasions of the right shoulder, elbow and forehead at Emergency Hospital yesterday after being knocked down by a Greyhound bus.

She ran from between two parked cars in front of her house into the path of the bus, which was operated by William E. Small, 36, of 3008 Channing street northwest.

She is being held for observation at the hospital.

Pistol, Gems Stolen

Edith Bingham, of 2314 G street northwest, reported to police yesterday jewelry and other articles valued at $77 were stolen from a second floor room at her home. She listed an opal ring, $10; a diamond and platinum ring, $40; a man's yellow gold ring, $20; two silver dollars and a .38-caliber revolver.

No Editors? We'll Run Paper, Say Reporters—to Get Poem In

Yep, Ruby Arlene Webb, 10, and Amy Wallauer Hayes, 11, are newspaper reporters. They write for the pencil-written weekly published by children in the 1400 block of Fairmont street northwest. Here they are in an "editorial conference." "Where are the editors? They went to a show. Well, we'll get out the paper!"

Journalistic Shakeup Occurs on Weekly Pencil-Written Sheet as Stage Lures 'Brass Hats' From Duty to Reading Public

A shake-up in Washington journalism occurred the other day when Reporters Ruby Arlene Webb, 10, and Amy Wallauer Hayes, 11, discovered that the editors weren't doing any work on the pencil-written weekly newspaper published by a group of children in the 1400 block Fairmont street northwest.

Tiny Reporter Ruby Arlene, blondish and full of zeal that reacts in her face, had the original determination. If the editors thought that an amateur theatrical production was more important than a newspaper, well the editors could be actors. She and Amy would run the paper.

Besides, the paper couldn't be dropped now. Amy had just written a poem. It was a "must." The pencils must move on the weekly and the imaginary presses must roll. Ruby Arlene, editor in chief, with all the editors out acting, wrote the poem into the weekly:

"As I walked into my garden,
I saw a horrid thing,
A little bird while on its nest
Had caught its tiny wing.

"As I took it in my hand,
It flew away to sing
A song of love and praises
To God for everything."

Then Ruby Arlene dashed off an editorial. "Gen. Rafael Trujillo leaves Washington, D. C., for New York. He will visit the New York World's Fair. He will be greeted in New York by Mayor LaGuardia . . . Gen. Trujillo is very much interested in the education of the youth of today because they will be the leaders of tomorrow."

Which the editor probably knew was as original an observation as the commencement orators ever make. But that couldn't be gone into. The comics for the next issue had to be drawn, and besides, the editor wanted to show the autographed picture of Trujillo that was given her last week when she gained an interview with the visiting Dominican.

William Berry Given 2 to 8 Years

William G. Berry, 35, was sentenced to from two to eight years in prison yesterday for an alleged attempted attack on a young woman, despite claims he helped officers investigating narcotic sales in the District Jail.

Richard Tedrow, Berry's lawyer, pleaded for clemency, telling Justice Proctor that when Berry was arraigned several months ago he obtained information about dope peddlers who invited arrest, then failed to make bond so they could sell drugs to fellow prisoners.

Anti-Alien Bills Bid for Votes, Geyer Asserts

Back-Home Pressure Not Behind Them, Says Representative

Seventy-odd anti-alien bills introduced this session are gaining headway on Capitol Hill, not because of pressure from "back home," but because Congressmen know they can attract votes by "wrapping themselves in an American flag," Representative Geyer (Democrat), of California, last night told Descendants of the American Revolution, of Washington.

The way to counteract them is to "say it with votes instead of flowers," the Congressman said.

He attacked the alien bills, along with the Dies and Woodrum committees, as aimed at the suppression of minority groups and liberal movements.

"We are all members of some minority group," he declared, "and we have to be careful lest in our fights are own rights are stifled.

Pointing out fewer persons have entered the country in the past few years than have left, he told the group that sponsors of the bills deliberately falsify facts, because "for a demogogue it's a fine hobby to ride."

Asked if he thought President Roosevelt would sign such a bill, he replied, "I wouldn't like to see the question put to him. I am hopeful he will run for a third term and he will need wide support."

New Navy Building Is Discussed

Park and Planning Commission Also Weighs Historic Ship Museum

Anticipating enactment of a bill providing for a new Navy Department building and adjoining berths for the Constellation and other famous American warships, the National Capital Park and Planning Commission yesterday tackled the engineering problems involved.

Consideration of the historic ship museum project, together with transfer of 13 playgrounds and recreation centers to the District Commissioners, and announcement of virtual completion of land acquisition for the Columbia Heights Recreation Center, highlighted the commission's one-day monthly meeting.

Col. R. S. Thomas, head of the Army Engineer's office for this district, and a group of military engineers, advised the planners it would be feasible to berth the historic war vessels in the Potomac, provided the seawall is heightened and other precautions taken to protect them from freshets, ice and floating debris.

Bill Asks Funds

A bill, introduced in the House a few weeks ago authorizes expenditure of $23,466,000 for the Navy building, a museum and the ship berths. The site is bounded by Twenty-third street, F street, Constitution avenue and the Potomac River.

War Department engineers said it would be practicable, if it were decided not to expose the ships to the river, to display them in an artificial basin between Rock Creek and Potomac Parkway and Twenty-sixth street. Lifting them out of the river and taking them to the basin would be possible from an engineering standpoint, it was explained.

Following are the 13 play areas, most of which are already in use, jurisdiction of which was transferred to the District government, to be administered by the new District Recreation Commission:

Land Purchase Approved

Land purchase contracts which all but complete acquisition for the Columbia Heights Recreation Center at Sixteenth and Lamont streets northwest, submitted by Norman C. Brown, real estate officer, were approved.

The few remaining parcels, on which purchase cannot be negotiated, will be obtained by condemnation. Thomas S. Settle, commission secretary, explained this project has consumed much time because of the high cost of the land, which is being acquired at the rate of $100,000 an acre.

Brown also reported the purchase of 15 acres needed for the Fort Drive project, between Fort Totten and the District line, and 7 acres in the Bureau of Standards valley, desired for addition to Rock Creek Park.

The planners authorized an exchange of land in Anacostia between the Alley Dwelling Authority and office of National Capital Parks to expedite a housing development sponsored by ADA.

No action was taken on Senator Carter Glass' bill providing for erection of a toll bridge near Great Falls or the Kennedy bill on reorganization of the District government, each of which was discussed.

Wright's Homer in Ninth Wins for Nats, 11-9

Washington Rally Scores Six in Ninth

Circuit Swat Comes In Pinch With Two Out; Leonard Victim Of Bombardment

Special Dispatch to The Post

St. Louis, July 14.—Chunky Taft Wright left his irksome seat on the Nats' bench late this afternoon, grabbed a bat, went to the plate as a pinch-hitter, and swatted a dramatic ninth-inning home run with two teammates on base to lift the Nats to a last-ditch, 11-9 victory over the Browns.

The story-book homer by Wright, occurring at a time when two were out and the Nats trailing, 9-8, was the climactic wallop of a gallant 6-run surge by the Nats in the ninth, and averted a second successive defeat by the Browns.

All six of their ninth-inning runs were scored by the Nats after two were out and were in keeping with the wild battle of the early innings, when Dutch Leonard, pride of the Nats' staff, was knocked out of the box. At one point the Nats wiped out a 4-0 deficit and went into a 5-4 lead, only to lose their advantage in the seventh when young Joe Haynes yielded four runs to the Browns.

Looks Bad for Nats

There were no indications that Washington would win the ball game when lanky, left-handed Howard Mills fanned Jimmy Bloodworth to open the ninth. Charley Gelbert drew a walk, but when Rick Ferrell popped out weakly, the Browns apparently had the ball game.

And then things began to happen. Sammy West was sent in to bat for Haynes. He singled to center. George Case singled to center, scoring Gelbert. Buddy Lewis batted for Vernon and drew a walk that filled the bases. Jake Early ran for the ailing Lewis and Johnny Welaj followed with a single to center that scored West and Case.

Welaj's blow reduced the Browns' lead to 9-8, and put the tying run on second. Then it was that Manager Harris resorted to the strategy of inserting Wright as a pinch hitter for Bobby Estalella, who had hit a two-run homer off Mills in the sixth inning. If it seemed doubtful strategy, it was immediately justified. On the second ball served by Relief Pitcher Johnny Whitehead, Wright bashed a home run to the center field stands, scoring in a jubilant parade behind Early and Welaj to lift the Nats two runs in front.

Kelley Replaces Haynes

Dutch Leonard, seeking his tenth victory of the season, was rudely rebuffed by the Browns. Knocked out in the first inning of a previous start here, Leonard lasted the first inning today but yielded four hits and four runs. A base on balls, doubles by Laabs and Heffner and Gallagher and a single by McQuinn drove the runs home. Joe Haynes replaced Leonard in the second inning.

The Nats didn't get a hit off Southpaw Mills until the fifth inning, when Estalella led off with a single. They came up with two runs in the inning when Berardino muffed Travis' grounder, and Bloodworth doubled down the leftfield line to score both his pals.

In the next inning, the Nats came up with three more runs to take a 5-4 lead. Case drew a walk, and,

Red Ruffing Hurls Yanks Out of Slump

By the Associated Press

Detroit, July 14.—Dependable Red Ruffing snapped the world champion New York Yankees out of a six-game losing streak today with an eight-hit pitching job which enabled them to beat the Tigers, 6 to 3.

Ruffing, in recording his twelfth victory against three defeats, gave only four hits and was on his way to a shutout until the eighth, when four hits climaxed by Hank Greenberg's double gave Detroit three runs.

The big Yankee righthander was in top form and had the Tigers popping up all over the place. As a result, the Yankee team tied a major league record of only one assist in a game. Joe Gordon made this in throwing out Earl Averill in the fourth. The mark has been recorded six times in the past.

Detroit, after beating the Yankees yesterday, fell apart today and made four errors behind Schoolboy Rowe and George Coffman. This pair held the champions to eight hits and blanked Joe DiMaggio for the first time in 18 games—breaking the best streak in the majors—but the Tigers never were in the running after the third.

Bill Dickey doubled behind a walk and an error for two runs in the fourth. In the sixth, Gordon singled, Babe Dahlgren doubled and Ruffing singled for two more runs. In the seventh, Tom Henrich singled and reached second on Roy Cullenbine's fumble, DiMaggio was intentionally passed and both subsequently scored on a single by George Selkirk.

Gil Hunt Wins Maryland Net Quarter-Final

Baltimore, July 14.—Doubles day was celebrated yesterday in the Maryland State Open tennis championship tournament at the Baltimore Country Club. Five hours of play in the team competition advanced this bracket to the semi-final round with two seeded and two unseeded teams remaining.

The singles quarter-finals were completed in the morning with Champion Gilbert Hunt and third-seeded Harold Surface, from Washington, D. C., and Kansas City, Mo., respectively, advancing in straight sets to join Wayne Sabin, second on the select list, and unseeded Eddie Aloo, from Portland, Ore., and San Francisco, Calif., in the semifinals today.

Hunt eliminated Henry Prusoff, of Seattle, Wash., 6—3, 7—5, matching the lanky Coast player in every move. The champion applied speed when Prusoff tried to out-drive him, and topped his soft shots with tantalizing drops that went unreturned for points.

Surface swept aside another Coast entrant, young Jack Kramer, in 6—2, 6—2 sets. Both matches had begun the day before and were halted by rain, but the participants elected to make fresh starts yesterday.

As fortune decided, the best match of the doubles and the one that produced an upset kept the larger portion of an interested gallery in the stands until 7 p. m. It was the triumph by George Toley and Ronald Lubin, of California, over the second seeded pair, Harold Surface and Henry Prusoff, 6—4, 5—4, 6—3.

Giants Cut Reds' Lead To 5½ Games

4-1 Victory Earned On Pair of Homers; Derringer Loses 4th

By the Associated Press

New York, July 14.—Battling to check the Cincinnati Reds' romp through the National League, the New York Giants turned back the Rhinelanders, 4 to 1, today on a pair of home runs by Bill Jurges and Frank Demaree, each with a man on base, in the sixth.

The victory cut the margin between the two clubs to 5½ games.

Young Bill Lohrman and Paul Derringer tangled in a scoreless pitching duel for five innings with the Reds getting only one hit and the Giants three. Neither starter finished but Lohrman got credit for his seventh victory against six setbacks and Derringer was charged with his fourth defeat after 11 triumphs.

Trailing 4-0 because of two singles and two homers in the sixth, Derringer was relieved by Peaches Davis at the start of the seventh. He gave way to a pinch-hitter and Henry Johnson finished.

Picard, Nelson Win, Meet for Title Today

By Bob Considine.

Flushing, N. Y., July 14.—It will be the Open champion of the United States, Byron Nelson, against the year's leading money winner, Henry Picard, in the final round of the $15,000 P. G. A. tomorrow at Pomonok Country Club.

Nelson swent into the final round today with a miraculous burst of golf that put out Dutch Harrison, of Oak Park, Ill., by the drubbing margin of 9 and 8, even though Harrison was one under par at the time Nelson clinched the match on the 28th hole.

Picard, armed with a hed-hot putter, rammed through Dick Metz, of Chicago, 1-up, after Metz had made a sensational finish that threatened to wipe out Picard's lead. Metz's 18-foot circuitous putt for a birdie on the 17th hole of the afternoon round, and his four additional birdies earlier in the afternoon, caused the outcome to be cloaked in suspense until the final green, when a par four gave Picard his edge.

Nelson's Playing Stands Out

As tense as this match was, and as pluckily as Metz fought back after being 3-down at the end of the morning 18, it was the performance of Nelson against Harrison that knocked the gallery off its pins. Harrison was playing great golf, but Nelson's playing just wasn't of this world. Byron birdied the first, third, fourth and eighth holes for a 31 on the first nine. Then he came along to take a four on the par-3 tenth, the first bogie he had in 56 holes. But he birdied the 11th, the 13th, 15th and 18th to give him a 65 for the 18 holes.

Harrison's 71 for the morning 18 was 1 under par, but he was 6 down by that time to the baby-faced Texan.

Nelson wouldn't cool off. On the afternoon round he birdied the second, fourth, fifth and sixth. On the 320-yard par 4 fifth he drove 15 feet past the pin. He was 9 up at the end of the first nine of the afternoon round, though Harrison—who looked like a man who had seen a ghost—was playing fine par golf. The match ended on the tenth green when both took par 3s, for by that time Harrison was mathematically eliminated.

7 Under Par

Nelson's 65 for the morning round was 7 under par for the tricky 6,354-yard course. He is 19 under par for the 156 holes he has played since the hectic tournament started.

Moller Scores Two Upsets in Western Golf

By the Associated Press

Oklahoma City, July 14.—Larry Moller, a 30-year-old lumberman from Quincy, Ill., assumed the role of giant killer in the Western Amateur Golf Tournament today, blasting both former champion, Gus Moreland, and defending champion, Bob Babbish, out of the meet on successive rounds.

After taking the measure of Moreland, the Peoria (Ill.) veteran, who holds the course record, 3 and 2, Moler staved off a gallant rally by the titleholder from Detroit, to win 1-up in the quarterfinals.

Babbish defeated Moller, two-time champion of Illinois, in the semifinals of the 1938 tournament at South Bend, Ind. Harry Todd, 22-year-old Dallas, Texas, husky, played steady golf in bumping Don Kennedy, of Stanford University, 4 and 2. Kennedy won only two holes.

Stewart "Skip" Alexander, lanky Duke University player from Durham, N. C., who eliminated "Spec" Goldman and Art Doering, took the Oklahoma City Country Club course apart this afternoon in outsing Ed Kingsley, of Salt Lake City, Utah, one of the pre-meet favorites, 2 and 1.

Alexander, 20-year-old junior at Duke, was 3 under par with a 32 on the first nine. The blow that shook Kingsley so badly he never recovered was an eagle the collegian bagged on the 260-yard, par 4 eighth hole when he drove the green and holed out a 20-foot putt.

Frank Steidle, of Hot Springs, Ark., eliminated Reynolds Smith, of Dallas, former United States Walker player, 4 and 2, in the quarter-finals after defeating Walter Emery, of Tulsa, Okla., another one-time Walker cupper, by the same score on the previous round.

This Morning

POVICH

The situation being what it is in the American League, it's inevitable that certain folks of a suspicious nature are smirking at the slump of the Yankees. The cynics are viewing the tightened league race as "good business" on the part of the Yankees and the league generally and there are dark hints that the Yankees are kissing off ball games to stimulate trade.

Ten days ago, the American League pennant race was, indeed, a joke affair. The Yankees were winning as they pleased. They were rocking along with an .800 percentage and a 13-game lead over the Red Sox when the July 4 milestone was passed. Attendance throughout the league, even at Yankee Stadium, was dropping. New York fans appeared surfeited with victory, and customers in other league points were highly unexcited about the 1939 pennant race.

And then the Red Sox moved into New York for a series with the Yanks. The immediate aim of the Boston club was to consolidate its second-place position where it was being hard-pressed by the White Sox and Indians. The Red Sox won their first meeting with the Yanks. Then they won two double-headers from the Yanks. Five straight times they bumped off the New York Yankees and the New York's league lead dwindled to 6½ games.

You could have gotten 40 to 1 in the Broadway books that it wouldn't happen—that the Yanks wouldn't drop five in a row to the Red Sox. But it did happen, and what had been a runaway race was transformed into a hot battle for the lead. And when the Yankees dropped their first game in the West on Thursday while the Red Sox were winning, their lead shrank to a mere 5½ games.

Talking of 'Throwing' Games Is All Hooey

The Red Sox saved the race, but as naturally as the night follows the day, there followed widespread hints that the Yankees weren't bearing down; that it was to their interest to tighten the race and that they could well afford to toss a few games to heighten fan interest around the league.

Well, if you believe that, you don't know the Yankees, and you don't know baseball. The fact is that the most worried man in the United States after the Yankees had dropped three straight to the Red Sox was Manager Joe McCarthy. With anything less than a 10-game lead, McCarthy is an unhappy and irascible individual on the baseball scene. He was actually panicky during the series, and frightened, too.

The premeditated loss of a ball game is no easy thing to achieve, incidentally. Hal Chase and a pair of his pals who were thrown out of baseball for crookedness tried it one afternoon in Boston and lost a big bet on themselves to lose. They didn't bargain on a pair of wild throws on easy grounders they deliberately hit to the infield and were forced to win the game in the ninth inning.

The Yankees would have won at least two of those crucial games with the Red Sox if it weren't for sensational stops by Second Baseman Bobby Doerr on balls that were ticketed for base hits. And at Detroit on Thursday, where the Yankees took a beating fro mthe Tigers, they would not be so dumb as to help the Tigers to score nine runs in one inning, which decided the ball game. It would be too obvious to lose a ball game that way.

It's Just a Natural Slump—They'll Bounce Back

No, the Yankees have merely encountered a season slump at a time when the Red Sox are getting hot. Their slump was predicted by no less than Manager McCarthy, himself, who declared weeks ago that his club was winning at too terrific a clip, that no club could stand that sort of a pace. "I can't keep these fellows keyed up this way all summer," McCarthy confided to friends. "There's bound to be a let-down, and before it comes I want to be in a lead big enough to offset it."

And another thing. It's significant to this department that the Yankee slump occurred in the wake of the near-maudlin Lou Gehrig Day testimonial. The Yankees were upset by that. Their emotions underwent a terrific strain that day as their old pal, Gehrig, poured out his heart before the microphone in the presence of 61,000 blubbering fans. Hard-boiled Yankee teammates were visibly affected and it may be no coincidence that they haven't displayed the old Yankee dash since.

But the surge of the Red Sox scarcely means curtains for the Yankees. They're still the best ball club in baseball by so far that any challenge is absurd. You don't notice Jack Doyle, who two weeks ago closed his odds books on the Yankees, making any motions to reopen it. In his book, the Yanks are still a certainty to win the pennant.

They should certainly win it. They have the most best ball players. Their infield of Dahlgren, Gordon, Crosetti and Rolfe may be the best defensive quartet ever in the uniform of any single club. Joe DiMaggio is the finest player in all baseball and Bill Dickey the game's greatest catcher. New York's pitching staff is a stand-out and if Joe McCarthy isn't the best manager in the game the records lie.

All credit to Joe Cronin and the Red Sox for the battle they are making of it, for the renewed interest they instilled into the league race. But the Red Sox, bluntly, don't have pitching that deserves mention in the same inhalation with the Yankees. Joe McCarthy's worries are founded not on reason. He's simply a fellow with a fretful nature.

Dodgers Win, 14 to 4, Gain First Division

By the Associated Press

Brooklyn, July 14.—Belting four Pittsburgh pitchers for 17 hits, the Brooklyn Dodgers sank the Pirates, 14 to 4, today to climb back into the first division of the National League.

Ten Dodgers went to bat and all participated in the carnage of two five-run innings and another three-run splurge. Harry Lavagetto started the trouble with a home run in the first off Joe Bowman, who had to be relieved in the second and was charged with the loss.

Luke Hamlin went the route for Brooklyn, giving ten hits, including a home run by Chuck Klein. This was one of three hits collected by the veteran outfielder and came in the seventh inning after he had been thrown out, but got another chance because Umpire Babe Pinelli had called time as the pitch was thrown.

Mako Defeated At Spring Lake

Spring Lake, N. J., July 14. (AP)—Gardner Mulloy of Coral Gables, Fla., scored a surprising straight set victory today over favored Gene Mako of Los Angeles, 6-2, 6-1, 6-3, to enter the finals of the annual Spring Lake invitation tennis tournament.

Mako, ranked third nationally, was seeded second behind defending titleholder Frank Parker of Pasadena, Calif., in the tournament.

Mrs. Walper, Miss Mapes Are Beaten

Woman Professional And Her Partner Win, 5 and 4; Helen Will Go on Tour of Links

Helen Dettweiler made the final appearance of her local exhibition tour yesterday at Washington Golf and Country Club, pairing with Middle Atlantic Champion Marion Brown to defeat easily the pro-amateur duo of Mrs. Leo Walper, District champion, and Virginia Mapes, driving range instructor, 5 and 4.

Miss Dettweiler's plans for the two months include a trip to southern Virginia next week and then a series of exhibition matches with a fellow pro, Helen Hicks Harb, in the New York area, in addition to a tournament or two.

The business-woman golfer needed par on the last two holes for a 74, and Dorothy White Nicholson's course record but she chipped her second shot in the ditch on the seventeenth and took 5 on the eighteenth to post an unofficial 76.

Misses Dettweiler and Brown proved far too strong for the other team, taking a 5-up lead on the first nine with a 35 best ball, even par, and coming back in 38. Miss Dettweiler birdied both the par 5 holes and had nines of 37-39. Miss Brown had 79, Mrs. Walper 84 and Miss Mapes 86, all the scores including several generously conceded putts.

The Mapes-Walper team won only one hole, the fifteenth, where Mrs. Walper played a great second shot and was down in two putts for a par. Miss Dettweiler followed the golf with a shot-making exhibition and a talk on the fine points of the game.

Mrs. Hahn Wins Al Sigmund Cup

Mrs. Gilbert Hahn won the Al Sigmund Cup at Woodmont, completing the 36-hole tourney with a net score of 165. The winner had 97-14—83 the first day and 96-14—82 yesterday.

Low gross went to Mrs. Ralph Goldsmith with 96-94—190, while Mrs. L. Schloss captured second low net with 105-18—87, and 98-18—80—167.

INDIAN SPRING

Mrs. H. O. Porter won low net in the selective holes' event yesterday at Indian Spring with 49-11—38, while Mrs. C. P. Medley was second, 48-7—41, and Mrs. R. C. Dunbar had low putts—26.

The guests were led by Mrs. J. F. Cramer, Manor, 46-8—38, with Mrs. Ellen Harris, Beaver Dam, second, 44-5—39, and Mrs. Gale Pugh, Manor, low putts with 30.

Homers Help Ross Defeat Chisox, 7-3

By the Associated Press

Chicago, July 14.—The Philadelphia Atheletics pulled the White Sox back into a third-place tie with the idle Cleveland Indians today by beating Chicago for a second straight time, 7 to 3, on home runs by Frank Hayes and Sam Chapman.

The two homers accounted for five runs, Hayes' eight round tripper coming off Jack Knott with Bob Johnson on base to climax a four-run fourth after Wally Moses, Dick Siebert and Johnson each doubled.

Chapman's eleventh home run, off Relief Pitcher Johnny Marcum, came after Siebert singled and Johnson walked in the ninth.

Coupled with the A's 12-hit attack was Lee Ross' seven-hit pitching. Going the route for the first time this year, Ross gained his second victory as against seven defeats.

Wright's Home Run Wins for Nats, 11-9

with one out, Welaj banged a triple off the wall in right center to score him. Then it was that Estalella swatted a 374-foot homer to the stands in right center and scored behind Welaj.

Haynes, who was moving along nicely with a shut-out performance for five innings, lost his lead in the seventh. He yielded three hits and four runs. He walked Heffnerm, pitched a double to Laans, purposely passed McQuinn to fill the bases, and then saw the tying run score on Clift's single. Gallagher's long fly to Estalella and Hoag's single produced three more runs.

In the eighth, Berardino doubled to left and Heffner singled to give the Browns their 9-5 advantage which, it developed, wasn't sufficient to withstand the Nats in the ninth.

Bees Rally To Conquer Cards, 10-4

Lanning's Relief Job And 15-Hit Attack Wipe Out 2-0 Deficit

By International News Service.

Boston, July 14.—Boston's Bees today combined a 15-hit assault with Johnny Lanning's capable relief twirling to pound out a 10 to 4 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals.

St. Louis scored two in the first inning and Boston came back with six, both starting hurlers, Lou Fette for the Bees and Bill McGee for the Cards being routed in this frame. Fette was yanked after he was rocked for two tallies by the first four batters. Lanning came in and gave five hits the rest of the way, one of them Johnny Mize's eighteenth homer of the season.

Boston had three runs off McGee when Paul Dean came in and was clouted for a homer by Al Lopez with two on base. When Lanning doubled, Shoun replaced Dean.

Washington Club Canoemen Hold Last Drill for Races

Strong Array of Crews Winds Up Practice For Annual Middle States Regatta

The racing crew of the Washington Canoe Club went through its last training session yesterday for the annual Middle States regatta which will bring American Canoe Association paddlers from New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania to the Capital tomorrow.

Modestly claiming "an array of stars outshining a Hollywood premiere" will be on hand when the races and aquatic events open at 10 a. m., Canoe Club officials sent their paddlers through a stiff workout on the course above Key Bridge.

"Get out there and pull, boys, and I don't want to catch any of you in the water," Harry Knight, trainer of the crew, instructed. A veteran of more than 25 years in the canoe paddling business, Knight explained that the crew members are forbidden to swim for two weeks before a race as swimming softens up the muscles.

The local fellows will be seeking to down the present national champions in the tandem single-bladed event, Stanley Cimkowski and Frank Frick, of the Cacawa Canoe Club of Philadelphia.

Highlight of the affair tomorrow will be the canoe-tilting competition. Bill Havens, jr., of the Washington club, holds the national championship and will have his father as his partner when he meets Adolph Springle, of the Viking Canoe Club, of Hackensack, N. J., champion tilter of the Atlantic division.

The local club's senior four-man double-blade crew is headed by Knight, an Olympic canoe racer in 1924, and includes Ebby Trilling, Bill Havens, jr., and Ben Romjue. This crew won the Middle States event last year. Ward Fleharty and Billy Johnson, Middle States and national champions in the tandem single-blade event last year, carry the hopes of the local club for additional points.

New Sandlot Team Hurls Open Challenge

Under the sponsorship of several Georgetown merchants, a new sandlot ball club reared its head last night at the home of Sam Edmonston, former Georgetown U. athlete. It is composed of such stars of the local universities and high schools as Bernie and Bucky Buscher, Bill Hawksworth, Bill Edmonston and Benny Winestein.

By way of starting its career with a bang, the club immediately hurled a blanket challenge at all unlimited teams in Washington, excepting, of course, the Senators. The elder Edmonston will manage and receive calls from "takers" at Potomac 4351.

Jack Cooper Sets Mark in 'Graw Races

By the Associated Press.

Havre De Grace, Md., July 14.—It took a 62-year-old veteran, Jack Cooper, of Kansas City, Mo., to show the youngsters high speeds today at the Havre De Grace Yacht Club's tenth annual regatta.

Cooper, a world's record holder for 225-cubic-inch hydroplanes, capped the first day's program with a mile speed trial down and back for an average on the straightaway route of 85.511 miles an hour.

His sleek streamlined Tops III was a bare .412 mile an hour off the world one-mile record now held by George Cannon, set January 16, 1939, at Rock Ledge, Fla.

Spring Hope Wins 2 Blues At Washington

Mrs. J. H. Whitney's Entry Certain to Be Contender for Title

By Anne Hagner

Washington, Va., July 14.—Spring Hope, smooth-fencing brown mare from the stable of Mrs. John Hay Whitney, won two blue ribbons in the opening session of the two-day Rappahannock Horse Show today.

Spring Hope's victories, annexed in classes for lightweight hunters and hunters over the outside course, indicate that she will be high in the running when the championship rosettes are dealt out at the end of tomorrow's events. Her present form netted her the Culpeper tricolor last week and a reserve ribbon at the Washington Horse Show in June.

District of Columbia entries were a trifle bothered when the law of gravity exerted itself three times to keep them out of the ribbons. The first spill came when Margaret Cotter's usually consistent Rocksie did not take off at a stiff fence on the outside course, sending both of them flying through space. Neither was injured, however, and the high-jumping son of Half Rock came back to win a blue in the open jumping sweepstake and a second in the class for open hunters.

The next two falls were taken by Betty Couzens from her toppy-looking chestnut, Repulsion, when he refused a fence on the outside course and another in the ring. The pair finished the day by taking a third in the hunter hacks, however.

Other high scorer during the day was Mrs. D. N. Lee's brilliant gelding, Glory Road, who took the model class and the road hacks, but was unable to score in jumping classes.

Jockey Don Meade In Trouble Again For Rough Riding

New York, July 14 (INS).—Don Meade is in another jam as a result of rough riding at Empire City today. His riding license was renewed by the Jockey Club last April after he had been on the ground for almost three years.

In the sixth race, in full view of thousands, Meade, riding Count Maurice down the home stretch, bumped into Captain James, throwing him against Copper Tube and unseating Jockey R. Dotter, who was thrown from Captain James as the latter stumbled.

Meade was roundly booed for his rough tactics.

Airport Tank Meet Brings June Stan Back Into Action

June Booth Stan, comely George Washington University student, who has not participated in local swimming meets for more than a year, will return to competition on Monday night in the Airport Pool meet.

Mrs. Stan informed Hardy Pearce, manager of the Airport Pool, yesterday that she had decided to campaign actively again, and that was to be the first test.

She is entered in the 60-yard backstroke event, one of the three races open to women. Mrs. Stan has held both indoor and outdoor District backstroke titles, and she is expected to finish well up among the leaders in the Airport meet.

She is the outstanding entrant from the Shoreham Club, which has entered five girls in various events.

Willie O'Steen, Stocklinski Tennis Choices

Favored in Public Parks Championship Which Open Today; 66 Entered

Petite, hard-hitting Willie O'Steen and slender Ray Stocklinski of the steady "soft" game are strongly favored to retain their respective titles in the annual Public Parks tennis championships which open today on the courts at Sixteenth and Kennedy streets.

Stocklinski's task is expected to be considerably tougher than Miss O'Steen's, however, for there are 66 entries in the men's division and only 17 in the women's and he must also face a new threat in the improving junior Billy Turner, who is a newcomer this year to the Public Parks tournament.

Seeded below Stocklinski, in order, are Allie Ritzenberg, University of Maryland ace and co-Southern Conference doubles champion with Nathan Askin; Hugh Shelton, Billy Contreras, Joe Baker, Turner, John Smith and Tom Sherburne.

Ranked below Miss O'Steen, the new District champion and runner-up to Mary Cootes Belin for the City of Washington championship, are Charlotte Decker, former playgrounds champion; Mrs. Dorette Miller and Edith McCulloch.

Entries for the doubles tournament close at 6 o'clock this evening at The Tennis Shop and at the Rock Creek courts. Doubles play is scheduled to start tomorrow morning.

Man of the Month

By Walter Johnson.

(WJSV-General Mills Broadcaster.)

Taft Wright forges into the lead in the Man of the Month contest for July, following his heroics at St. Louis yesterday. Points were distributed as follows:

To Wright, six points, because his pinch-hit home run with two out in the ninth and two on wiped out the Browns' lead and won the ball game for the Nats.

To Bobby Estalella, two points, because he made two of the Nats' hits, including a homer that put the Nats in the lead in the sixth inning.

To Johnny Welaj, two points, because he hit a triple that figured in two runs and because he drove in two important runs with a single in the ninth. The totals:

Taft Wright	18	Buddy Lewis	5
Cecil Travis	15	Ken Chase	4
Charley Gelbert	11	Rick Ferrell	4
Dutch Leonard	10	George Case	4
Buddy Myer	9	Jake Early	3
Johnny Welaj	9	Bobby Estalella	3

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, July 14.—Strictly poisonal:

The moulting bird of peace may be a blessing to humanity but it's something of a pain to Art Rooney, owner of the Pittsburgh Pirates football team . . . For Whizzer White, Art's Yank at Oxford, has decided to stay abroad and snub the $7,500 which Rooney has offered him to play this season . . . He would have come back if the war looked as if it was about to start . . . That loud whirring sound you heard the other night was James E. Sullivan, the late-great A. A. U. official, revolving in his mausoleum . . . That was the night the A. A. U. permitted Glenn Cunningham and the Rideout twins to run a special mile as a side attraction for a Brooklyn night game.

CONSIDINE

Tony Galento's fee for refereeing boxing matches jumped from $0.00 to $1,000 per night, after being knocked out by Louis . . . His price for appearing on the Charlie McCarthy program would have been $5,000 if he had won . . . Tony, who is content that he'll knock out Louis if they ever meet again, has a new idea about his loss . . . "I'd 'a knocked the bum out in the first round if I hadn't thought of something, sudden," he says. "I stagger him with that left hook in the first round and I'm just about to follow up with the right when I figure he might cut me if I took a long swinging punch. So I tapped him a few times with my jab and alla va' sudden something warm begun running down in front of my eye, and he had cut me already."

Grippo's Hex Had Curve

The only player unanimously chosen on the All-America team which was picked by the coaches of the National Professional Football League—Dartmouth's Bob MacLeod—won't turn pro . . . The hypnotism which Jimmy Grippo practices on his pug, Melio Bettina, begins three or four days ahead of a fight . . . It's a mild steal from Coueism, for Jimmy keeps saying to his hairy guy, "you're going to be strong that night. You're going to hit harder than you've ever hit. You're going to be able to take it better than ever." . . . As it turned out Grippo's hex had a curve on it, and it hit the wrong guy . . . Bettina's noisy friends from Beacon (N. Y.), who gave him a brass-band welcome when he was introduced before the Conn fight, weren't sports enough to give him a good substantial yell for the game, if losing, fight he put up.

One of the best baseball stories in recent years, it seems to us, is the rise of Bucky Walters, of the Reds, to a point where he is now the leading pitcher in the National League . . . He was a hopelessly marooned third baseman with the Phillies when he changed positions and began his long, tough pull to the top.

Walper Wagers He Can Shoot 69 at Washington, Wins Bet

Middle Atlantic P. G. A. Champ Takes Eight On Par 4 Third Hole, but Sinks Five Birdies

Leo Walper made a few wagers he'd shoot a 69 yesterday at Washington Golf and Country Club, and after taking an eight on the par four third hole, won the bet.

The Middle Atlantic P. G. A. champion, playing with Al Houghton, was in the ditch twice on the third hole, with two penalty strokes, and finished with the big eight. From there in he didn't miss par on a single hole and dropped five birdie putts for the 69.

L. P. Smith scored a hole-in-one on the ninth hole of the Washington course, using a two-iron for the 193-yard shot. Smith was playing with Jack Pelton and L. A. Lawrence when he dropped the first perfect shot of his career.

Club President Col. C. B. Garnett will meet M. E. Horton in the feature of the intraclub match between R. E. Hotze's Moaners and L. Franklin's Boasters today at Washington.

The lineups: 1:30—Ralph Fowler and H. J. Webb (M) vs. D. C. Freshman and J. B. Powell; 1:35—Al Leverty and Ray Moorman (M) vs. A. T. Hester and V. B. Huffman; 1:40—F. W. Stricklin and H. T. Nuttycomb (M) vs. J. E. Myers and W. F. Persons; 1:45—H. T. Ricketts and Jack Mason (M) vs. W. B. Stringham and H. F. Ashton; 1:50—M. E. Horton and R. E. Hotze (M) vs. Col. C. B. Garnett and O. Franklin; 1:55—Guy Chase and Ed Fay (M) vs. J. C. Palmer and J. B. Skinner.

Eight Centers Have Chance For Net Title

Hopes of seeing their representatives capture the Department of Playgrounds annual senior girls tennis title were still bright for eight recreational centers yesterday as the tourney reached the quarterfinal rounds at Chevy Chase with each survivor from a different playground.

Shirley Coombs, the little Happy Hollow netter given one of the best chances to win the crown, led the day's matches with a 7-5, 6-3 victory over Burroughs' Vivian Yobst. Another Burrough's lass, Roselyn Pope, also fell by the wayside when she laced Janet Fitzwater, of Garfield. The scores were 7-5, 6-4.

It remained for the last match of the day to furnish the most excitement. Dorothy Blake was the eventual winner, but not until Quinnette Herbert had run the first set to 22 games, and had hung on in the second set only to be beaten finally, 12-10, 6-3. Park View's Mary Gray had little trouble in her match with Jean Lohr, of Garfield, winning her way to the quarters, 6-1, 6-4.

Yesterday's matches closed out the week's activity, the quarterfinals being listed for Monday at Chevy Chase starting at 2 p. m.

Monday's Schedule

Lynda Branham vs. Jean Echols; Winnie Lake vs. Betty Jacobs; Janet Fitzwater vs. Shirley Coombs; Mary Gray vs. Dorothy Blake.

Australians Lead In Davis Cup Play

Long Beach, Calif., July 14 (U.P.).—The Australian Davis Cup squad today defeated the Philippine Island team in straight sets in the first singles matches of the North American zone semifinals.

Adrian Quist, No. 2 ranking Australian amateur, swamped Amada Sanchez, 6—1, 6—2, 6—2, in the opening match. Jack Bromwich pounded out a narrow 8—6, 9—7, 6—3 victory over the fleet Felicisimo Ampon in the second match.

Redskins Receive Manton's Contract; Salary Terms O.K.

Tillie Manton, place-kicking specialist, yesterday signed a contract with the Redskins for the 1939 season. In a letter from his Fort Worth, Tex., home, Manton advised General Manager Jack Espey that salary terms were satisfactory.

Purchased from the New York Giants shortly after the start of last season, Manton kicked an important field goal in the Redskins victory over Pittsburgh. He is 26 years old, entering his fourth year as a pro, and was a teammate of Sammy Baugh's in the Texas Christian U. backfield. As a pro, he compiled a record of 27 consecutive extra points after touchdowns.

Picard, Nelson In P.G.A. Finals

He took only 100 shots for the 28 holes he played today.

Dick Metz contributed an item of sportsmanship to the tournament at the fifth hole of his afternoon battle against Picard when Picard, rummaging through his golf bag in search of a pitching club, discovered a strange niblick. The strange club gave him a total of 15 sticks, one over the legal limit. The penalty is disqualification. Picard immediately told Metz about the club, denying that it belonged to him.

"You can do anything you want to do about it," he invited Metz.

"The hell with it," Metz said, as he hit a shot up on the green.

Chance Queen Captures Williamsport Purse at Hagerstown

Two Jockeys Are Injured In Bad Spill

Fowler and Miller Hurt in Seventh Race; Charming Boy Takes Second in Feature

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent.

Hagerstown, Md., July 14.—Chance Queen, a combination of War Admiral and Seabiscuit when she won three races at Wheeling, transferred her speed to this track and carried the colors of J. McNamara to an easy victory in the Williamsport Purse, outstanding event on the "fish day" program here.

In the stretch, Sea Finn bore out and appeared to interfere with Chilly Ebbie and Lady Cirek. Jockey W. Snyder, who rode Chilly Ebbie, claimed a foul against Sea Finn, but the stewards soon ordered the official sign displayed. Sea Finn was the favorite at a $4.30 mutuel.

Without as much as taking a deep breath this 6-year-old daughter of Chance Play galloped to the finish line six lengths ahead of the nearest opposition. Charming Boy, a speedster from Charles Town, was second, with Brain Child in third position in the field of seven going the Mason-Dixon course of slightly less than 5½ furlongs.

Jockeys George Miller and Tommy Fowler were injured as a spill marked the running of the seventh race. Miller suffered a broken arm and Fowler a broken shoulder as the horses, Choice Goods and Hagerstown Boy, went down at the paddock turn soon after the start of the mile and a sixteenth event. Both boys were taken to the Hagerstown General Hospital for further examination.

The field was closely packed going into the turn and Choice Goods, Fowler's mount, appeared to stumble and fell. Hagerstown Boy tripped and sprawled over the fallen horse.

Chance Queen, which has seen much better racing days, turned in time of 1:08 2-5 over a heavy track. A terrific storm early this morning turned the oval into a sea of mud and it was sticky and holding during the program. The winner was heavily backed and paid a mere $3.90 mutuel.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TRIXIE LASS, $20.00, $8.20, $5.80; TRIVET, $4.20, $3.50; STEALING HOME, $6.30.

TRIXIE LASS, slow to begin, came around horses to engage TRIVET and came gamely in closing stages. TRIVET, close to pace of BEST POLICY and STEALING HOME, took command when they faltered, but could not resist winner while kept to hard drive. STEALING HOME forced pace of BEST POLICY and weakened. BEST POLICY quit. TWO ACES ran out badly at all turns.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:08½. Off 5:11. Winner, S. G. Bailey's ch. g. (8), by Donnaconna—Blink. Trained by J. G. Davis. Value to winner, $275; second, $75; third, $35; fourth, $15. Time, 2:08 4-5.

HUPPY, forwardly placed from start, gained lead second time around, was headed by BIG MUM approaching stretch and came out nicely in closing stages. BIG MUM, always close up, rallied when placed to drive to set to front, but weakened thereafter. MAD DASH set early pace and weakened badly. BRIGHT LIGHT, off well, saved ground, but stumbled and was held safe. OUR SHIP raced wide throughout. The others were badly outrun.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:43½. Off 5:45. Winner, Miss L. Seay's b. m. SEA FINN, close up from beginning and barely escaping spill at first turn, took command over CHILLY EBBIE nearing stretch and bore out in front of CHILLY EBBIE and LADY CIREK in stretch. Jockey Snyder's claim of foul against winner was not allowed. CHILLY EBBIE set good pace and came again after being displaced. LADY CIREK worked way to contention on outside, but had to be taken up in stretch when cut off. CORA KAY was taken up when horses fell. CHATTERDOO was pulled up when blocked by fallen horses. CHOICE GOODS and HAGERSTOWN BOY went down at paddock turn.

Business Rise Holds in July Col. Ayres Says

Cleveland Banker Cites 3 Main Reasons for December-May Slump

Cleveland, July 14.—Business activity turned sharply upward from May to June, Col. Leonard P. Ayres, vice president of the Cleveland Trust Co., said today. Last December the index of the physical volume of industrial production, as measured by the data of the Federal Reserve System, stood at 104. It declined to 102 in January, and to 99 and 98 in February and March. Then it fell abruptly to 92 in April and May. The recovery in June carried it back upward to the 98-99 level of February and March, giving the record of business activity during the first half year a V-shaped pattern. Improvement seems to be continuing in July.

There appear to have been three principal causes which account for the decline from December to May. One was the continued tension abroad with its recurrent threats of war. A second was the shutting down of the coal mines in April and May. The third restrictive factor was less obvious than either of these two, but probably more important. It was a sharp decrease of the inflow of funds contributed by new corporate financing. In the past four quarters those funds declined from 450,000,000 to 191,000,000, to 89,000,00, and then increased a little to 151,000,000. Such changes have delayed effects on business, but important ones.

Federal Spending

Meanwhile the net contributions of Federal spending have been running rather steadily at about $12,000,000 per business day, while those of State and municipal financing have averaged about $4,000,000 a day. It now seems reasonable to expect that there will be a well sustained inflow of funds from Federal spending and from State and municipal financing during the remaining months of the year, but there is little basis for judging how large the contribution from new corporate issues is likely to be.

Agricultural prospects are good, and retail trade is holding up well, and particularly so in the rural districts. Building construction is making a distinctly better record than it did last year or the year before, although there was a decline in residence building in June. The automobile companies have already closed down most of their plants for the change-overs to the production of the 1940 models, but even so the June output of 310,000 was larger than had been expected, and 64 per cent above that of June of last year. War threats are still the greatest business deterrents.

So. Pac. Moves Head Office to San Francisco

New Directorate Composed Entirely Of Californians

By the Associated Press

New York, July 14.—A new guide post on the recently established path over which many corporations are moving out of Wall Street was erected today by the Southern Pacific Co., with the announcement that the headquarters for its board of directors and executive committee will soon be transferred to San Francisco. A new committee composed entirely of Californians will manage the road.

The announcement came simultaneously with the news that Hale Holden, 69-year-old railroad veteran, has retired on pension as chairman of the board and from active service. Angus B. McDonald, president, assumes Holden's duties.

"In anticipation of Mr. Holden's retirement," said the company, "the executive committee has had under consideration for more than a year changes that should be made in the executive organization of the company, and after intensive study, particularly in the past six months, reached the conclusion that the headquarters of the board of directors and the executive committee should be removed from New York to San Francicco, the center of its Pacific Coast operations.

California Board

"Accordingly, the committee sought the services of outstanding business executives of California having large general experience to serve as members of the board of directors and the new executive committee, with the result that the following named gentlemen have consented to serve:

"Allen L. Chickering, senior partner of the law firm of Chickering & Gregory, of San Francisco; James B. Black, president of Pacific Gas & Electric Co., of San Francisco; Stuart L. Rawlings, of San Francisco, retired mining engineer; and V. H. Rossetti, president of the Farmers & Merchants National Bank of Los Angeles."

The new directors replace Holden, George E. Roosevelt, Deeering Howe and W. F. Bull. With C. E. Perkins, of Santa Barbara, and McDonald, the president, with headquarters in San Francisco, they will constitute the executive committee.

The post of chairman was discontinued. The offices of the general counsel and secretary also are to be moved to San Francisco, leaving the road's New York headquarters occupied only by the personnel of the financial staff.

Workers Put Up Capital in Trade For Wage Pact

Belleville, Ill., July 14 (AP).—Three hundred employes had entered an agreement today to furnish $175,000 working capital to the Enterprise Foundry Co. here in return for assurances the company would stay in business in Belleville for at least ten years and would make no wage reductions during that period.

For their advances, employes of the company, which manufactures stoves, will receive interest-bearing bonds, secured by a mortgage on the company's plant, maturing in five to ten years. The money will be used for development of new business.

Arthur O. Spoeneman, president of the company, and an employes' committee began negotiations about a month ago when workers brought to the management's attention reports the company contemplated moving from Belleville. Spoeneman assured them the foundry would not be moved provided the company would receive co-operation from its employes.

Atlantic Coast Line Orders 2 Streamliners

New York, July 14 (AP).—Atlantic Coast Line Railroad announced today it had ordered two seven-car stainless steel trains powered with 2,000-horsepower Diesel engines from the Edward G. Budd Manufacturing Co.

The new trains will be put on the New York-Miami run about December 1.

Wheat Strong But Corn Falls To 5-Year Low

Low Prices Attract Wheat Buyers But Corn Drops to 43 Cents

By the Associated Press

Chicago, July 14.—Despite extreme weakness in corn prices, which sagged more than a cent to the lowest levels since April, 1934, the wheat market today put on a strong recovery performance, scoring gains of around a cent.

Absence of purchasing incentives depressed the corn market, but investors and consuming interests were reported attracted by the low level of wheat values, and their buying kept that market strong most of the session. While the break in corn unsettled the entire market, all commodities rallied before the close, with wheat and rye leading the upturn.

Wheat closed ⅝ to ¾ higher than yesterday after scoring gains of as much as 1¼ cents from early lows. Final quotation in July and September were 66⅛ and 66⅞ to 67. Corn closed unchanged to ⅛ lower; July, 43¾; September, 45⅛ to 45¼. Oats, ⅜ to 1⅝ down. Rye, ¼ off to ½ up, and lard unchanged to 5 higher.

Moderating temperatures in parts of the grain belt induced some selling of both wheat and corn, but generally fair and warmer weather was predicted and rain was badly needed in some districts. Flour demand diminished in the Southwest, but mills were after cash wheat, and Kansas City reports said rumors of export business, presumably through the subsidy, were in circulation.

Short Covering

The advance in wheat was helped by moderate short covering, which offset the reduced volume of hedging sales. Receipts here of 501 cars, only part of which were inspected, were the largest of the season, but only a small percentage of this wheat was for sale. Premiums of several cents a bushel quoted for good grades of cash wheat over futures made the latter an attractive purchase for consuming interests.

Some of the selling which tumbled July corn 1⅝ cents to 43 cents, a five-year low in that market, was associated with 1 to 1½ cents decline in the cash market, and filing of notices for delivery of 605,000 bushels tomorrow on July contracts. At 43 cents July corn was 8 cents lower than six weeks ago and 16 cents lower than a year ago.

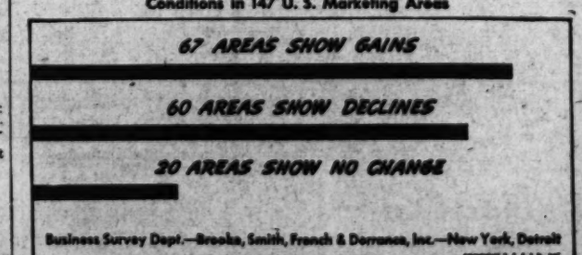
Business in Washington 2% Over June and Year Ago

"Where's Business?" for June—Conditions in 147 U. S. Marketing Areas



New York, July 14.—Washington was one of 67 trading centers showing an improvement in business during June over May, according to the monthly survey of 147 trading areas of the United States conducted by the Business Survey department of Brooke, Smith, French & Dorrance, Inc., New York and Detroit national advertising concern.

Business in Washington as of July 1 stood at 3 per cent below normal, a gain of 2 per cent over the standing of June 1. On July 1, 1938 the city's business index stood at 5 per cent below normal.

"June business conditions rose higher in 67 areas," the report states, "and in 20 others they held to the level of the previous month. Decreases were registered in the remaining 60 areas although in many cases the declines were nominal."

The greatest June gains were registered in the following areas: Augusta, Boise, Boston, Chicago, Columbus, Dallas, Evansville, Greenville, Joplin, Lincoln, Manchester, Memphis, New Orleans, Oklahoma City, Omaha, Philadelphia, Providence, Reading, Rockford, San Diego, Springfield, Ill., St. Joseph, Mo., Terre Haute and Waco.

The following areas were closest to normal in June: Atlanta, Austin, Bakersfield, Billings, Boise, Cheyenne, Dallas, Green Bay, Houston, Jacksonville, Little Rock, Manchester, Miami, Mobile, Phoenix, Reno, Richmond, Shreveport, Spokane, Terre Haute, Washington, D. C., Winston-Salem and Yakima.

Buying Urge Falters Near Week-End Favorite Issues Gain Others Recede Trading Drops to Under 600,000 Shares

New York, July 14.—Ebullient feelings which pervaded financial markets earlier in the week disappeared in a typical midsummer Friday session. In a fairly broad market, with issues traded just under the 700-mark, prices eased in all groups, though in small amounts. It was noticeable, however, that selected stocks responded to demand readily. Two-thirds of the day's most active issues went higher in contrast with the drop in the general level.

Volume showed a considerable shrinkage as big board turnover amounted to 543,620 shares, about half the daily total most authorities, including the president of the exchange, believe is required to pay Wall Street expenses. The big news of the day, in fact, was that exchange authorities are taking steps to encourage and enlarge trading. The close found the 100 key stocks down an average of 0.20 point.

In commodity sections, corn sold to the low since 1934 while wheat finished ⅝ to ¾ higher after a bad start and cotton eased 1 to 3 points.

Brokerage Bank

Although the character of share trading provided little of interest, the financial district had plenty to talk of and think about in the answer by the exchange to the SEC suggestion for a brokerage bank. The action taken by William McMartin, president of the exchange, in inviting four highly regarded financial experts to serve as a public examining board in connection with the entire matter of the SEC suggestions, was received with general approval. Recognizing that the question goes far beyond the issue of whether or not additional machinery, safeguards or what have you, are to be provided, a number of people in the financial district believe it would be particularly advisable to have such a study in progress this year and next. It would tend, according to some opinion, to prevent Wall Street being used as the usual "horrible example" when politicians ascend the rostrums for the 1940 campaign. In any event, brokers will be solidly in favor of any proposal, the execution of which would be likely to increase trading volume.

President and WPA

Of importance to the business outlook were several news developments. President Roosevelt's firm stand on the WPA strike issue—that strikes cannot be called against the Government—was widely commended. Even those most sympathetic to the relief problem were in entire approval, pointing out that every deserving person in this country can be assured of a square deal from the relief authorities, but that Federal aid must be recognized as such, not to be used for the benefit of any particular class. Neither must its administration be influenced by the so-called pressure groups.

Motor car production snapped back after the holiday week, although effects of the approaching closeout on runs of 1939 models was apparent. Price declines in motor shares were, on the whole, larger than in most divisions, Chrysler, General Motors and Packard, however, all recorded small fractional advances in brisk dealings.

Loft Day's Leader

Loft was the day's leader, advancing ⅜ of a point as "accurate" estimates of its 40-week earnings statement, scheduled for release Monday, were circulated. Apparently the street expects a favorable showing.

Westinghouse made a good showing with a rise of 1½ points. On the other hand, losses of a point or more appeared in American Can, Telephone, Commonwealth & Southern preferred and Union Carbide. Cash buying was reported to include a number of the high-priced issues. Brokers reported that the demand for puts and calls has improved with some puts close to the market written, including Sears Roebuck, 2½ down for 30 days; Johns-Manville, 3; Philip Morris, 2½; Gypsum, 3, and International Nickel, ½ down for 30 days.

Bonds Irregular

Listed bond trading was quiet today, with the trend irregular. Despite the sharp jump of excess reserves, banks took little interest in Treasury obligations, which remained almost completely idle. Best corporate bonds were similarly dull, while speculative bonds moved irregularly in a narrow range. Foreign dollar bonds showed gains in equal numbers. Turnover was only $4,950,000.

Long term United States Treasury bonds were slightly easier, but intermediate-dated isues held their ground. Guaranteed bonds of the farm and home corporations were dull throughout. Telephone bonds were virtually unchanged in the corporate section, while best power and light, railroad and industrial issues were firm.

Medium-priced carrier bonds were in small demand, apparently because of official support of the notion of buying up cheap bonds. Borderline and default rails were similarly firm. Holding company issues turned uncertain, while industrial convertibles were quiet. Communications bonds added to their recent gains.

Latin-American default bonds were neglected in the foreign section, and the European variety of disregarded pledges likewise failed to attract any interest. Polish bonds remained firm, while Italians were lower. Best rated foreigns held their ground.

Silver Reductions By Treasury Cut Imports in Half

By the Associated Press

The Commerce Department said yesterday that silver imports were cut in half the week ended July 7, when the Treasury was cutting its price for foreign silver almost daily. The week's imports dropped to $1,161,291, compared with $2,605,323 the preceding week.

The tendency of silver owners to withhold their metal until the market price stabilized was shown by sharp reductions for Mexico, whose shipments were only $414,776, and for Canada, which sent only $44,171 worth here during the week. The only other large shipper was England, with $323,980.

Gold imports also declined to $39,595,630, compared with $77,844,359 the preceding week. Major gold shippers were England, $20,415,881; Netherlands, $7,463,050; Switzerland, $2,868,229; Canada, $4,547,328; Mexico, $1,475,758, and India, $1,448,335.

Drastic Action Needed to Save Stock Markets

N.Y.Exchange President Confers With Head of Securities Commission

By the Associated Press.

William McC. Martin, jr., president of the New York Stock Exchange said yesterday that "something drastic must be done in the near future if the usefulness of the market is to be preserved."

In an interview following a conference with Jerome Frank, chairman of the Securities Commission, Martin said that the volume of business of the New York Stock Exchange had dwindled to only a few thousand shares daily in recent months.

And, he added, the brokerage community, although it has had a "severe shakeout" somewhat contracting its facilities for business, still is geared to conduct a business of 1,000,000 or more shares a day. Martin stressed, however, that "not too much emphasis should be placed on volume" in considering exchange problems.

Break-Even Point

"Generally speaking," he said, "1,000,000 shares daily are needed for Wall Street to break even—even after the shrinkage in the brokerage business of recent years."

Martin sent a letter yesterday to the chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission, stating that he had invited four experts as a "public examining board" to study the feasibility of creating a "brokerage bank" in Wall Street.

The four are Randolph Burgess, former vice president of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York and now vice chairman of National City Bank; Carle C. Conway, chairman of the board of Continental Can Co.; Walter J. Cummings, chairman of Continental Illinois National Bank & Trust Co. of Chicago; and Roswell Magill, former Undersecretary of the Treasury.

July Cotton Closes Higher, Others Lower

New York, July 14 (AP).—Liquidation of the July delivery and transfers from this month forward dominated cotton futures trading today. July went off the board at noon with a net gain of 3 points but other months closed 1 to 2 points lower.

A leading spot interest was credited with selling and switching about 30,000 bales of July. When the contract went into the discard, however, the market quieted considerably.

Brokers still had nothing definite from Washington to work on concerning export subsidy plans and as a result activity in new crop deliveries tapered off. Bombay brokers and trade houses bought contracts while there was scattered hedging and professional offerings.

Cottonseed Oil

Cottonseed oil futures took another tumble today after a show of steadiness at the outset. When the September delivery hit a new five-year low price, short covering gave the market a small boost from extreme losses, leaving the close 5 to 10 points down.

Sales totaled 123 lots: September, 5.91; October, 5.96 bid; December, 6.03 bid; January, 6.13 bid.

Crude brokers continued to quote Southeast and Valley oil at 5 cents nominal and Texas 4½ nominal.

United Air to Buy Six 42-Passenger Sleeper Planes

Chicago, July 14 (AP).—United Air Lines announced today they would buy six 42-passenger Douglas DC-4 super mainliners, largest commercial land planes in the world, for overnight tran-continental sleeper service. The fleet will replace the present 14-passenger DC-3 sleepers. The new ships will cost approximately $500,000 apiece.

W. A. Patterson, United president, formally notified executives of four other domestic airlines of the intention to buy. These were American Airlines, Eastern Airlines, Pan American and Transcontinental and Western Air, all parties with United to a contract with Douglas Aircraft Co. for construction of an experimental plane of this type.

The production type plane will have a gross weight of 66,500 pounds, and a maximum speed of 237 miles an hour.

Cotton Consumption

The Census Bureau reported yesterday that cotton consumed during June totaled 578,448 bales of lint and 71,655 of linters, compared with 605,353 and 73,622 during May this year, and 443,043 and 56,788 during June last year.

$1,076,314 Tax Judgment Upheld

Chicago, July 14 (AP).—A ruling by the Federal Board of Tax Appeals assessing a deficiency income tax of $1,076,314.40 against the United Light & Power Co. was sustained yesterday by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals. The assessment against the public utility holding company involved income for the year 1928.

The Government contended that the United Light & Railways Co., a subsidiary of the holding company, turned a profit of $10,334,460.15 through an exchange of securities by various operating and holding companies and their subsidiaries. A Government contention that the profits were taxable because the transactions did not constitute a "statutory reorganization" was accepted by the court.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

C. C. C. offers an unusual deal, shown in today's box, upon which he nearly scared his partner to death. At a redoubled small slam contract, he won the first round of trumps with the seven spot which, before he gathered in the trick, was a great source of consternation to his partner. Luckily C. C. C. had read his trump holding aright; we once knew a declarer who tried this stunt at a grand slam bid only to learn he had mistaken a six for an eight. What his partner said to him after the hand was over and a set sustained, is not fit for publication.

Here is the way C. C. C. describes his adventure:

"Without a doubt it is far the best hand that this mediocre player ever had, and although the play of the hand does not require the manipulation of an expert, it is quite interesting to behold the perfectly gorgeous hand held by West.

"The bidding may be glossed over as unimportant, other than to ask who would not agree with West, that here was a great chance to pick up many points by putting in a double.

"Well, West led the diamond ace, which was promptly trumped by South. The highlight of the hand on the humorous side was the next lead by South, which was the heart three. At that lead North appeared deeply worried, but when his seven held he returned to the land of the living. (I might say that 'twas but a bit of facetiousness on the part of the declarer and this particular North enjoys such a ribbing.)

"After this play the club 10 was led, which was allowed to ride to West's ace. It was now plain that the hand was in, thereby assuring the declarer of a flock of much-needed points."

The Federal Diary

By The Diarist

THE COMPLETE office staff of the new administrator of the Federal Security Agency consisted at 10:35 a. m. yesterday of two persons—Paul McNutt, and the assistant administrator, Wayne Coy.

At that time they had places to sit and a desk apiece, but there weren't even any secretaries around to take their dictation. According to Coy, a hurry-call was sent out for pinch-hit stenographers who were to be borrowed from someone of the divisions. What divisions and what stenographers, not even Administrator McNutt himself knew.

It'll be another 60 days before the administrator's immediate "help" will be selected. "And at that," says Coy, "we are going to keep it down to as small a number as possible."

IT'S TOO BAD you can't pick flowers in Rock Creek Park. If you could, you might surprise your date with a hatful of about five different varieties of orchids. Lewis Kehr, ranger naturalist for the National Park Service, says the woods in town are full of them. Naturally they're smaller than the kind that get wrapped up in tissue paper and ribbon at the florist shop, but they're the genuine article. Their color range runs all the way from pink to green. Right now the rattlesnake orchid (not such a prepossessing name, we'll have to admit) is in full bloom everywhere.

Kehr, who has been in Washington only three months, and whom you're apt to meet if you take one of the nature rambles in and around the city this summer and autumn, hasn't lost any time getting a line on the fauna in these parts. For example up by Great Falls and along the C. & O. Canal, you may find underfoot, if you look hard enough, a very rare species of walking fern. It manages to travel around because every time one of the tips of its leaves touches the ground a new plant starts setting up shop.

Before his present assignment Kehr was a teacher of biology at St. Francis College in Wisconsin. He also taught at Northwestern and has degrees from there as well as from Marquette.

THERE ARE monuments . . . and then again there are monuments. The National Park Service is pretty anxious to make this clear. According to them it all began with Baron Alexander von Humboldt, explorer and scientist. It seems that when the baron was bushwhacking down in Brazil, he referred to certain big size natural formations as "monuments de la nature." So now there are 78 such areas in this country under the control of the NPS which are classified as such.

Other "monuments" like Fort Laramie in Wyoming; Scotts Bluff in Nebraska; and Fort Marion in Florida commemorate historic events or general periods in history.

EXIT INTERVIEWS are nothing new in Federal personnel offices but the practice of making exit service rating is more rare. The Society of Personnel Administration of which Oliver C. Short of Commerce, is president, considered them at length during a recent series of discussions with the society favoring the practice of requiring supervisors who are leaving their positions to report to the personnel office service rating for all employes who have been under their supervision.

The group also went into the matter of oral tests. Samuel H. Ordway, jr., and James C. O'Brien say "Make them more objective."

In a pamphlet on the subject Ordway and O'Brien point out that in the past too much has been expected of the oral exam. "There has been a tendency," they say, "to list a wide variety of inclusive adjectival terms—characteristics or traits of personality—without careful itemization and without adequate consideration of the relevance or probative value of each such so-called factor and without consideration of whether or not that factor can be objectively evidenced."

FOR INSTANCE: Appearance, poise, speech, manner, judgment, force, etc., are the factors generally measured in oral tests. However, in some positions, appearance may not be important, or speech may be entirely a negative quality. The things which are important in carrying out a particular job are the things to be stressed. (A Hollywood profile or a magnificent manner would be of little or no value in certain types of work.)

Quoting from the Ordway-O'Brien record: "The present approach takes the position that personal fitness for different positions can be evidenced more reliably on the basis of factors of performance than on factors of personality. For example if one of the requisite factors of performance for a particular job is capacity to obtain co-operation from others, the fact that an applicant has faced difficult situations in which he has needed to overcome opposition and has successfully obtained co-operation (supported by oral details as to time, place and circumstance) is evidence of his capacity."

ROVING COMMISSION: Maurice A. Miller who worked for nearly 21 years as a guard at Gettysburg National Military Park, covered something like 76,000 miles with shoeleather. Now he's in his seventies . . . retired . . . and sitting down.

PULITZER PRIZE NOVEL

THE YEARLING

By Marjorie Kinnan Rawlings

Chapter XXXIX

THEY WERE READY at last. They swung into the saddles and set off briskly southeast down the road in the direction of Silver Glen and Lake George.

Penny said, "Long as we're this clost, we best go see how ol' Doc Wilson come out. That place o' his is like to be half under water."

Buck said, "And him mebbe too drunk to know it."

The road dipped sharply between Baxter's Island and Silver Glen. The flood had washed down it with such volume and such force that the flat sand road was now a narrow ravine. Rubbish of all sorts was caught in the lower branches of the close-growing scrub pines. Farther down the road the toll of small animal life began to show. Skunks and 'possums seemed the heaviest sufferers. Their bodies lay by dozens on the ground, where the waters, receding, had deposited them, or hung with the trash in the limbs of trees. To the south and east there was a great silence. The scrub was always silent, yet Judy realized now that there had always been an undertone of cry and movement, where the creatures called and stirred, no more discernable than the wind. To the north, where high scrub land was dense with thin pines, there was an unusual rustling and distant chattering. The squirrels had evidently taken up residence here in droves, driven, if not by water, at least by hunger and fear, from the swamps and hammocks below them.

Penny said, "I'll bet that scrub there is purely alive with creturs."

They hesitated, tempted to go into the denseness. They agreed that it was best, as first planned, to skirt the low regions and determine the damage, and then to check on the still living creature population. Toward Silver Glen they reined in the horses.

"You see what I see?"

"If you didn't see it, too, I'd not believe it."

SILVER GLEN had overflowed and backed up, and the flood waters had rushed down to join it and make a greater havoc. Dead animals drifted about in the backwash.

Penny said, "I didn't know there was that many snakes in the world."

The bodies of highland reptiles were as thick as cane-stalks. There were dead rattlesnakes, king snakes, black snakes, coach whips, chicken snakes, garter snakes and coral snakes. At the thin edge of the receding water, cottonmouth moccasins and other water snakes swam about thickly.

Buck said, "I don't understand that. Ary snake kin swim. I've met a rattler in the middle o' the river."

Penny said, "Yees, but the land snakes got ketched in their holes."

The flood had reached everywhere, like the searching fingers of a 'coon, and had torn out all the things for whom the solid earth was their only refuge. A fawn lay dead with swelling belly. Jody's heart jumped. Flag might have perished in just this fashion, if he had not become, in time, a Baxter. As they gaped, two rattlers slithered across the ground in front of them. The rattlers ignored them, as though in the face of greater dangers man was of no concern.

Penny said, "Hit'll be all a man's life is wuth, for a while, to cross high land."

Buck said, "I mean."

They could go no farther East and turned North, skirting the low waters. Where there had been swamp, there were ponds. Where there had been hammock, there was swamp. Only the high infertile scrub had turned aside the devastation. Even here, pines were uprooted, and those that had stood, all leaned to the West, bowed down by the week-long weight of wind and rain.

Penny said, "Hit'll be a long day before them trees stands straight agin."

They became uneasy as they approached the branch. The water was still high here, well above the level of Lake George. Three and four days ago it must have been much higher. They stopped and stared down at the doctor's land, sloping to the lake. The thick hammock might have been a cypress slough. The giant live oaks, the hickories, the sweet gums, the magnolias, the orange trees, stood deep in a turgid wetness.

Penny said, "Let's try the road."

THE ROAD, like the one leading southeast from Baxter's Island, had formed a sluiceway for the waters. It was now a gully, and dry. They rode down it. Doc Wilson's house appeared ahead, dark and shadowy under the great trees.

Buck said, "I'll be blest if I see why ary man would choose a place this dark to live in, even to stay drunk."

Penny said, "If ever'body loved the same places, we'd be right overcrowded."

Water stood ankle-deep around the house. The blocks on which it rested showed that the water had at one time been over the floor. The boards of the broad veranda were warping. They waded to the front steps, eyes open warily for coiled moccasins. A white pillow-slip was tacked across the front door. A message was printed on it with ink. The ink had run but the letters were plain.

Buck said, "Us Forresters cain't read good. Read it, Penny."

"I have gone toward the ocean where this much water ain't so peculiar. I mean to stay drunk until the storm is over. I will be somewhere between here and the ocean. Please don't come after me unless it's a broke neck or a baby. Doc.

"P. S. If it's a broke neck no use anyway."

Buck said, "That Doc, he'd crack him a joke right in the Lord's face."

Penny said, "That's why he's a good doctor."

"How come?"

"Well, he gits to fool the Lord now and agin."

They laughed until they were weak. It was good to be lighthearted, when the world had been gray and heavy so long. They went inside the house and found a tin of crackers and a bottle of whisky on the table and added them to their stores. They turned back up the road and went north for a mile or so, then west again.

Penny said, "No use goin' to Hopkins Prairie. We kin figger hit's a pure lake."

Buck and Mill-wheel agreed. South of Hopkins Prairie they found the same story. The weaker animals and the ground creatures had been washed down to destruction. At the edge of a bay-head, a bear lumbered across in plain sight.

Penny said, "No use shootin' him. We may need his meat a month from now. Hit's too fur to tote him and we'll git many a shot before night-fall."

THE FORRESTERS agreed reluctantly. A shot to them was a shot, whether or no they could use the game. Penny would shoot nothing for which he could not see a use. He preferred even to kill the enemy bears at a time when their flesh was welcome and usable. They continued west. Here was a long stretch of gallberry flats that in good weather was the favorite haunt of bear and wolf and panther. The ground was always boggy, the vegetation low, and bay-heads to the north and east gave both food and hiding place. Now the section was a swamp. Water drained off quickly from a sand soil, but where the earth was heavy, it remained as on clay. Islands of scrub oak and live oak, and a few high palm hammocks, lay between the flats and the broad stretch of the scrub itself. They skirted the new-made swamp and made for these.

At first Jody could see nothing. Then when Penny pointed to this tree and that he was able to make out the forms of animals. They rode close. The creatures seemed unafraid. A fine buck stared at them. The shot was irresistible. Buck brought it down. They rode closer. Wild cats and lynxes peered visibly from the branches of trees. The Forresters urged their killing.

Penny said, "Hit's a pity we should add to their troubles. Seems like there'd ought to be room enough in the world for folks and creeturs, both."

Mill-wheel said, "Trouble with you, Penny, you was raised by a preacher. You look for the lion and the lamb to be layin' down together."

Penny pointed to the high earth ahead of them.

"Well," he said, "the deer and the bob-cat—there you be."

But he was forced to agree that every wild-cat on the loose, every bear, lynx, wolf or panther, meant depredations on hogs, chickens and cattle, and on the milder game, the deer, the 'coons, the squirrels and the 'possums. It seemed to make an endless circle of "Eat or be eaten. Kill or go hungry."

To Be Continued Tomorrow.

The Picture Story of the Explosive Rise of the Squalus and Its Sudden Dive Again to the Ocean Floor

1. BUBBLES surging to the surface gave first indication something was wrong

2. SUDDENLY one lifting pontoon zoomed up with a wild flurry of water

3. THEN the second appeared. Salvage workers were dangerously near in boat (arrow)

4. SPOUTING water, the pontoons buckled, sheered from lines attached to Squalus

5. THE SQUALUS, with suddenness of a dynamite blast, came up between them

Breaking Away from pontoons and salvage gear, the bow of Squalus pointed skyward and this picture recorded the vessel when it loomed 20 feet in the air. It disappeared in the same explosive flurry that it had appeared

6. BOW SKYWARD, the submarine shot up like a geyser without warning

7. 20 FEET of the 290-foot craft pointed almost vertically, and salvage workers maneuvered away from the churning water

8. UP FROM THE DEEP, the bow of sub remained in view only a moment, then . . .

9. PLUNGED again to the ocean floor. As suddenly as it had come up . . .

10. IT DISAPPEARED with its 26 dead to its resting place of May 26
